Grazing, Weed Management, Nutrition Highlight PFGC Meeting

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — More than 120 farmers and agri-industry representatives joined together to study the fine points of grazing, weed management, and nutrition at the 1996 Northeast Quality Forage Conference and Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) annual meeting here recently at the Shadowbrook Inn and Convention Center.

Ralph Quillin, owner and operator of Quillin Farm of Bourbon, Ky., set the pace for the day-long conference. Quillin has been involved in rotational grazing on his farm since 1981.

"If I get nothing else across today, maybe I'll offer you some insight on how (grazing) might suit you all better," Quillin said. "This is not a sales pitch for controlled grazing or rotational grazing. It's just simply our approach to using forages — the forages that we've got in Kentucky. The forages that you all have in Pennsylvania."

Quillin practices grazing methods with his herd of beef cows, heifers and steers, but he is quick to point out that although they're located on some "pretty pricey land," he didn't decide to graze simply because he couldn't make it financially any other way.

"At one time we ran up to 600 acres, row crops, top corn yields, top this, top that, so I'm not coming to grazing as a way of sour grapes, that I couldn't make it the other way. To me it's just more intuitive. It suits me better," he said.

Quillin's decision to graze came about when he began to look at dollars earned per acre.

"If you think about what you do in production agriculture, it's an energy deal. You all are energy converters," he said. "We simply convert energy from one form to a higher form. You're also energy conservationists. The person who spends the least makes the most."

On their farm, they essentially went from a hay producing system to a grazing production system using the same forage that was there, including fields of alfalfa, with success.

"We never killed a cow from bloat on alfalfa," Quillin said. "Instead of using mechanical harvesting agents, we're using biological harvesting agents."

He also was quick to point out that if you are going to implement a managed grazing system on your farm, you will have to find out what works best for you through trial and error.

"We don't have all the answers, we don't have all the tools and even if we did, they aren't going to be the right tools for every situation," said Quillin.

He also touched on three things related to sustainability.

"The very first thing is you've got to make a buck. You can't be sustainable if you're broke. The second thing is you can't tear down the plant. We don't want to lose fertility or lose topsoil with the practice. The third one is quality of life," he said.

The remainder of the programs were presented in breakout

GREENCASTLE (Franklin Co.) — Farming roots run deep in the rich southern Franklin County soil of Tidy Brook Farms, Meyers Road, Greencastle. A registered Holstein dairy herd and crop operation. Tidy Brook is owned by the father-son partnership of Mark and Alan Meyers.

Mark and his wife Lyndell, and Alan and his wife Kendra, are the third and fourth generations of Meyers to call this land home. Alan and Kendra's children, Ashley, 10, Whitney, 9, and Grant, 6, are a potential fifth generation of family farmers.

Mark's father, Norman, purchased the farm from his father, Lloyd, who founded the family operation when he began farming in 1910. A noted farm even decades ago, Norman's herd topped Franklin County in 1946 for dairy herd production.

That is just part of the background of Tidy Brook that visitors can read from a packet of information compiled by the Myers family about their operation and given to guests. For while the farm's colorful history dates to Civil War times, it is a black and white cow that has put Tidy Brook into the international history of dairy genetics in the 1990s and brought the Meyers visitors from around the globe.

Tidy Brook Sally Ned Boy was just a four-month calf when Alan Meyers picked her as his Christmas gift one December in the mid-1980s. He had begun working for his parents full time on the farm after his high school graduation and the gift offer was for any young animal he selected from the family herd.

A teen-age enthusiast of registered cattle and pedigrees, Alan had begun buying inexpensive calves at local sales during his high school years. They added to the herd, he was building from an initial calf given to each of Alan and his siblings by their grandfather when they were of age to begin caring for them. Alan's first

Grange Master Wants To Build Pride In Membership

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — William Steel is the new master of the Pennsylvania State Grange and he has an agenda — to build pride in membership and to help improve communications among the state organization's members.

The 57-year-old Beaver County resident has spent a good portion of his life in service of his local, state and National Grange.

In fact, he worked for about 16 years as the National Grange director of activities for its youth and young married members.

In 1985, when that national position was eliminated, Steel left Washington D.C. and returned to his family's 100-acre farm, where his 86-year-old father J. William Steel, is still active with a small cow-calf Hereford herd.

Steel was officially named master of the Pennsylvania State Grange during the organization's annual convention held several weeks ago in Warren. The position of master in the Grange is analagous to president in more modern organizations.

The Grange is a fraternal order with rituals and leadership positions named after Roman gods, goddesses and mythological characters.

While some people are put off by the ritualisim and references to mythology, Steel said he views the fraternal nature of the organization as one of its strengths.

"The fraternal nature of the organization is important to me," he said, "as compared to some of my predecessors.

"It is historically fraternal and I believe that will be an important part of its future. It gives a different outlook on life and people's needs," he said, adding that it provides a stronger sense of brotherhood and community spirit.

For four years prior to being named master, he served as state

Delmarva Broiler

DECEMBER 4, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds varied from plant to plant, but generally remained less than anticipated for early month. Seller offerings were irregular, but fully sufficient for current inquiry. Live supplies were at least moderate; weights were in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate to heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 61 to 75 cents. Trade sentiment was steady. In the parts complex, bone-in breasts and occasionally wings cleared well; however, overall movement was disappointing, and various items were increasing in availability, particularly leg quarters.

Wheat bids finished slightly higher after five consecutive days of lower trends. Improved export demand overnight offered strength to wheat bids. Corn bids were near steady with strong undertones as recent declines were seen as overdone and traders made corrections. Soybean bids were slightly lower, again, as recent indications that China may purchase bean meal and oil but has failed to appear as yet. Wheat 1 to 6 cents higher. Corn steady to 2 cents higher. # The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

NEW MOON, DEC. 10.

FIRST DAILY NEWSPAPER

On December 9, 1793, Noah Webster established the first daily newspaper in New York City. A graduate of Yale and one of the early trustees of Amherst College, Webster was better known for his lexicography, but went to New York to edit the American Minerva (later the Commercial Advertiser) as a way to support Washington's administration. News was powerful stuff However, Henry Austin Dobson (1840-1921) later wrote in "A Pleasant Invective Against Printing," that "The Press is too much with us: small and great; We are undone of chatter and on dit [one says], Report, retort, rejoinder, repartee, Mole-hill and mare's nest, fiction up-to-date"

Though it be honest, it is never good to bring bad news.

– William Shakespeare

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Don't forget to feed the birds! Put a barrel of sunflower seeds in a handy place, and dip some out every morning.

CHEESE STICKS

1 cup grated cheddar cheese
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg, beaten
3 tablespoons milk, or more
1/2 teaspoon chili powder

Preheat oven to 450° F Combine cheese, flour, baking powder, and salt Add egg and enough milk to make a stiff dough Roll dough on a floured board into 1/4- to 1/2-inch thick logs. Cut into 4-inch segments. Place logs on a greased baking sheet and bake 10 minutes, until golden brown. Serve hot

Makes 2 dozen.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

When a hawk is seen at sea, it means fair weather. But if a fish-hawk (osprey) is seen near a house, it signals a coming flood.

When the peacock's distant voice you hear, are you in need of rain? Rejoice, 'tis here!

Special Offer: Handy chart full of interesting weather proverbs Send $3 to Weather Chart, Dept UF, The Old Farmer's Almanac, P O Box 520, Dublin, NH 03444

Recommit Production To A Growing Food Supply

The World Food Summit convened in Rome in mid-November to review a three-year research effort called 2020 Vision for Food, Agriculture, and the Environment. Sponsored by the Washington, D.C.-based Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI), the report is quoted in a news release as saying that there has been tremendous gains in agriculture over the past 30 years. Crop yields have risen and food prices have fallen. But the world has become complacent, and investments in agriculture and food security are inadequate.

The result of this "backing-off" on production agriculture's push for maximum yields from the choice breadbaskets of the world due to political, social, and religious prejudices have stagnated the high farm potential to feed the poor countries. This is a tragic situation, particularly when we have the scientific tools to improve the lives of the hungry and poor.

IFPRI research shows that if the right measures are pursued, we can avert severe food crises in the most vulnerable regions and keep crop yields apace of the population growth worldwide. But we need the political and social will to take the necessary actions to prevent hunger.

At this time of year when the value of human life is reemphasized during the Thanksgiving and Christmas season, let's recommit production agriculture and the corresponding food distribution channels to a new effort to bring "good will to all men" in the form of a growing food supply that includes both the have and the have-not nations of the world.

Now Is The Time

To Attend Town Meeting

The second town meeting on Lancaster County — The Next Los Angles will be held on Thursday, Dec. 12 at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

The meeting will start at 7 p.m. The focus will be on property rights.

John Becker, Penn State agricultural attorney, will be discussing the history and concept of property rights. Stan Lembeck, Penn State, will discuss the zoning hearing process and how a person should prepare for a zoning hearing.

Ron Bailey, Lancaster County Planning Commission, will follow with a presentation on "Planning Vs. Takings." Roger Rohrer, farmer, will discuss "Just Compensation for Public Use of Private Property." I will end the evening with a talk on the "Structure of Lancaster County Farms In the 21st Century."

This should be a very important meeting discussing new ideas and concepts to be considered in developing public policy.

In order to keep Lancaster County from becoming another Los Angles, we need to develop innovative concepts to preserve our heritage and maintain the sustainability of Lancaster County agriculture.

To Look At Dairy Feeding Practices

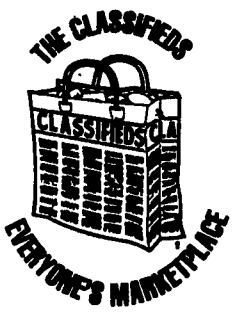
The composition of milk is affected in part by what a cow eats and how she is fed, according to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent.

The one component that is most easily affected by a cow's ration is the fat content of her milk. Some other components that are affected are protein and milk urea nitrogen.

To comply with consumer diet preferences, dairy farmers have been breeding and feeding cows to produce milk with lower fat content and higher protein content.

Late this summer when fat supplies became tight and butter prices escalated, farmers began feeding cows so they would increase the fat content of milk. In today's competitive economic environment, farmers need to be constantly looking at the pricing structure and making necessary adjustments.



Consult with your nutritionist and veterinarian when considering making feeding changes in order to avoid serious diet and health problems.

To Take A Break

Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, reminds us that dairy farming is a very grueling business.

The dairy herd needs attention twice daily, 365 days a year. There are no planned breaks, not even for Sundays or holidays.

It is very beneficial for farmers to have the opportunity to break away from the daily rigors of farm chores. Ways to do this includes trips or family vacation, take care of family emergencies, or devote time to other pressing business matters.

To do this you need a trained relief milker or trained farm sitter. A good way to train relief workers is to have them work for you periodically before they are needed. This will give them the opportunity to learn what is expected of them.

Before you leave the farm, let them know your schedule and how you may be reached in case of an emergency. Also, provide a list of telephone numbers of key support people such as the veterinarian, plumber, milking equipment people, helpful neighbor, etc.

All of this should help you have peace of mind, so you can truly enjoy your well deserved break from the demands of the farm.

Background Scripture:
Luke 1:26-56
Devotional Reading:
Luke 1:4-56

Youth camp at Perkasie, Pennsylvania, was a long time ago, but I nevertheless remember many of the old camp songs. One of my favorites goes like this:

Got any rivers you think are uncrossable? Got any mountains you can't tunnel through? God specializes in things thought impossible. He'll do for you what no other power can do.

It is our thinking, not God, that is limited. We think that some things are beyond His power. Oh, we may not say it that way — that there are things that God can't do — but we act like it all the same. Sometimes our prayers reflect this. There are times when I leave God off the hook, so to speak, giving him an out if the request I'm making seems too difficult or complicated for the Creator of the universe. Generally, I find, not that people ask too much of God, but not enough. And the reason they don't ask enough is that they don't really trust God to be able to deliver.

This is what we find in Luke 1. First, Zechariah and Elizabeth, than Mary and Joseph. "In the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God to a city of Galilee named Nazareth, to a virgin betrothed to a man whose name was Joseph . . . and the virgin's name was Mary" (26,27). Gabriel — who certainly was one busy angel those days — came saying: "Hail, O favored one, the Lord is with you!" And just as Zechariah was troubled by Gabriel, Luke tells us, "But she was greatly troubled at the saying . . ."

WHY BE TROUBLED?

Why was Mary troubled? Gabriel told her she was "favored" and that "the Lord is with you." Why should that trouble her? Was it not because, although Mary did not know what God wanted of her, she knew that whatever it was, it would change her life — and many of us don't want our lives changed.

I can't help thinking of some of the responses Gabriel might get if he came to us today. "No thanks, Lord, I just want a normal life!" Don't we all! "What will it pay? What are the perks? How about retirement benefits? Can I write a book about it?"

But the angel said to Mary, "Do not be afraid, Mary, for you have found favor with God" (1:31). As Gabriel had comforted Zechariah, so he now comforts Mary. What does this favor mean? "And behold, you will conceive in your womb and bear a son, and you shall call his name Jesus" (1:31). Gabriel goes on to assure that this child will be called "Son of the Most High."

GOD'S 'FAVOR'

Mary does not reject this prophetic utterance, but she still does want to know, "How can this be, since I have no husband?" It is natural for us to question how something can happen when it doesn't seem possible. "I have no husband" is a reasonable human response, but Gabriel takes her beyond mere reason: just as the Holy Spirit had made barren Elizabeth conceive, so "The Holy Spirit will come upon you . . ." Humanity has its limitations; God's Holy Spirit does not.

The key is found in Luke 1:37, "For with God nothing will be impossible." For that is God's specialty. To be sure, it usually requires our cooperation. Gabriel had not given her a contract or explained the fine print. She is going to have to make her decision on the basis of trust. And so, unlike Zechariah, Mary overcomes her troubled doubts and commits herself: "Behold, I am the handmaid of the Lord; let it be to me according to your word" (1:38).

When Mary went to visit Elizabeth in a little town outside of Jerusalem, the unborn John leaps within Elizabeth's womb and she says to Mary, "Blessed is she who believed that there would be a fulfillment of what was spoken to her by the Lord" (1:46).

God's specialty is what you and I call "impossible." Our specialty must be to believe and trust in his promises.

God specializes in things thought impossible. He'll do for you what no other power can do.

PACD Appoints Executive Director

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Robert Kaufman, president of the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts (PACD), has announced the appointment of Susan Fox as the Association's executive director.

The PACD is a nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting the Commonwealth's 66 conservation districts in their efforts to promote the wise use of natural resources.

Fox replaced Kurt Leitholf who accepted a position with the Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources.

Fox recently returned to the United States from Canada where she worked for the past 10 years. She brings more than five years of association experience to the PACD.

In Canada, she managed the New Brunswick Hog Marketing board and the pork producers association. Most recently, she coordinated an export development program for the Canadian Meat Council (the national association of federally inspected meat processors in Canada).

In addition to her association experience, Fox has also worked for the provincial department of agriculture, a management consulting firm and the farm credit banks.

She has a bachelor of science degree in agriculture, magna cum laude, from West Virginia University and a master of science in agricultural economics from the University of Tennessee.

"We are very pleased that Ms. Fox has agreed to become the executive director of the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts. We look forward to her assistance in continuing to improve conservation efforts in the Commonwealth," Kaufman said.

World Wide Leader in Quality Isolation Calf Housing

Did You Know?

University tests and tens of 1,000s of satisfied dairy producers have proven isolation calf housing, hutches, are absolutely the best way to raise healthy calves Progressive dairy producers do not sacrifice calf health for personal convenience

Calf-tel is the only thermoformed hutch Thermoforming is a process that imparts strength to the polymer like forging does to steel Rotocasting, a process used by all other plastic hutch manufacturers, creates a weaker, less durable product that is prone to cracking

Calf-tel is the only hutch manufactured with completely opaque material to effectively eliminate the green house effect This heat trapping effect overheats calves when temperatures climb above 80° F and also causes uncontrollable temperature swings daily when temperatures drop below freezing Over 100,000 Calf-tels are helping raise healthier, growthier calves worldwide from Florida through the sunbelt to California Washington across the dairy belt to New England and in 20 foreign countries

Calf-tel is the only hutch made of high molecular weight polyethylene plastic with a high load UV blocking pigment This quality material enables Hampel Corp to warranty Calf-tel for ten years, the longest in the calf hutch industry

Long after competitive hutches are discarded, used Calf-tels sell from $125 to $200 each–even after ten years of use Such a high residual value decreases cost per hutch to as low as $12 per year

When operator comfort is a concern, creative dairy producers have provided covered service alleys or placed Calf-tels in two or three sided shelters during inclement times

Grange Master

overseer, or vice president, before making it be known that he would seek the position of master.

Outgoing master Gordon Hiller had announced his intention to not seek another term, and Steel said he pursued the position because, "It felt it was the right time for me, and for my concerns for the organization."

His background involves growing up on the "general" farm, becoming a member of the Big Knob Grange, or more correctly the Big Knob Juvenile Grange, as its youth-member division was then called, when he was about eight years old.

His father was involved in the local organization, and Steel grew up with it.

When he got older he became less inolved with the organization, but he did become somewhat more familiar with Big Knob, the name of the highest geological structure in the county.

He said he once climbed Big Knob, when he was 18, after being recruited by his father, a volunteer with the local fire company, to help battle a brush fire.

Steel got the one-time job of having a portable, fire-fighting tank strapped on his back (commonly known as an 'Indian Tank'), and walking the mountain dousing flames.

It wasn't a pleasant job, as anyone who has ever toted the water tanks can attest.

He then attended Geneva College in Beaver Falls, on a chemistry scholarship. He received a bachelor of science degree and worked for seven years as a chemist with Dusquene Power and Light at the world's first commercial nuclear power plant — the now decommissioned Shipping Port Atomic Power Station.

He left in 1969 for a position with the National Grange.

In that position he did program development, ran recognition programs to encourage young people to develop and grow, and was coordinator for the world's first published sign-language song book.

He said he hired an expert in music, and expert in signing and interpretaion, and an expert in publishing and the 1976 book was created. It is called, "Lift Up Your Hands," and is available through state or national Grange offices.

Pennsylvania State Grange Master William Steel is the 21st master. Behind him on the wall are the portraits of his predecessors of the post. A new photograph frame will have to be built for Steel and future masters.

Standing next to the the Pennsylvania State Grange sign outside its Harrisburg headquarters building, William Steel, current Grange master, says members need to assume more pride in membership because the organization does more than serve as a structure for summer picnics — it helps members' lives through state policy development.

The book grew out an earlier commitment the National Grange made in the 1960s to become associated with a disability and to work to diminish, if not eradicate the effects of the disability.

While the Lions Club is associated with vision and eye care, the Grange teamed up with the deaf and hard of hearing.

Out of that grew the organization's programs for supported and teaching sign language, and providing hearing education programs.

The book helped make the program more accessible and fun for members. There are now local, state and national sign-a-song contests.

Steel and his wife Mary-Lee (the hyphenation comes from her school days when there was more than one girl with the same name), have three sons.

The oldest is Adam B. Steel who just earned a doctorate in electrochemistry from the University of Maryland. "I attended his dissertation," Steel said. "I understood a few of the words."

His second oldest is William H. Steel, a chemistry and computer science teacher at an afluent private high school.

The youngest son, Charles, is currently a senior at Gettysburg College, in the final effort to secure a degree in chemistry.

Master Steel smiled at the familial affinity for chemistry.

But Steel was first interested in understanding the higher order. In high school he had been a preministerial candidate.

In 1991, several years after returning to the family farm, he became a certified lay worship leader for the area Lutheran Church.

What that means is that, while he isn't authorized to perform marriages and most ceremonies, he does offer sermons and essentialy serves his church congregation at its "pastor." Once per month, an ordained Lutheran minister does visit and peform the communion services and other ceremonies.

"We don't have regular pastors in small country churches," he said, again smiling. Once, he said he performed an "emergency baptism."

He said he and Mary-Lee, a former school teacher employeed off-farm as an assistant manager of a fabric shop) enjoy traveling to different churches and helping to cook dinners.

In addition to that, he said he enjoys living in rural Pennsylvania because it is an area with a community where patience, friendship and neighborly concern are still considered valuable and admirable virtues.

The same is true for the Grange, he said. He just wants members to realize that their organization does represent a call to higher ideals and better living through mutual concern and support.

A lot of Granges need to be revitalized, he said, and they need to be publicly reaffirmed as more than an organization through which membership entitles invitations to summer picnics and social gatherings.

The biggest problems he said he sees is a lack of communications.

The State Grange does publish an inhouse newsletter, "The Advocate," but Steel said more is needed to get local Granges more actively sharing information, skills and concerns among each other.

They need to know how important the Pennsylvania State Grange is in shaping public policy.

The challenge to the Atlantic Bell attempt to "rebalance" its rates — i.e. charge less to those in the cities and more to urban customers, but no more overall — is something with which the Grange took leadership, but it is also something that wasn't done by the Grange alone.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — President Lane Sollenberger has reported that the PA DHIA Board of Directors has been in the process of strategic long range planning to prepare our Association to meet the needs of our members in the 21st Century. Our strategic plan includes new products and services, marketing, management and governing, and cooperative joint ventures. The external and internal forces facing the dairy industry of today are immense and organizations must adapt to change for the benefit of the producer members.

Part of our strategic plan includes enhancing Board performance and size to fit the demands of the future. After intense study by the Board, we have decided to downsize the Board from 18 to 11 Directors. New director districts have been determined under guidelines established in the bylaws. Delegate representation and procedures were not changed. The Board members will be presenting the plan at local annual meetings and district meetings.

Also you will find the dates and locations of the district meetings and the State Annual Meeting. I encourage you to attend your local annual meeting, the district meeting, and the state annual meeting where we will discuss these issues. PA DHIA must not only be efficient in member service, but also in its governing procedures.

It is an honor to serve you as your president, I thank you for the opportunity to prepare for our future together.

Here is something often overlooked...

Only Patz gives you 45 years of experience with hook-and-eye chain, resulting in a chain so good that others are attempting to copy it.

Many Patz Gutter Cleaner chains are still working well after more than 30 years of use.

After the Patz patent on hook-and-eye chain expired, some other companies have attempted to copy the Patz chain. Some promote 10- and 12-year warranties on chain—but they have not yet had 10 or 12 years of experience with hook-and-eye chain.

Patz has continued to improve its chain for 45 years with special-formula steel, special forging techniques and special steel hardening processes.

Rely on the proven, long-life chain. Patz provides a 15-year chain warranty because so many chains are working well long after 15 years of use.

Better yet, your Patz chain warranty is backed up by a solid, reliable company that has been serving farmers for 45 years with the same family ownership.

Insist on Patz chain!

Awards Presented At Meeting

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — The Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) held its annual meeting recently in conjunction with the 1996 Northeast Quality Forage Conference at the Shadowbrook Inn and Convention Center.

In a brief business meeting, PFGC President Dave Hyleman recognized three individuals for outstanding work in managing and promoting sound forage and grassland management practices.

The PFGC Special Award was presented to John N. Weidman of Mt. Joy. Weidman not only was and is a strong supporter of the PFGC and its programs, but he also was a member of its board of directors, serving as president in 1973.

The PFGA Teaching award was presented to Craig Williams of Tioga County. According to Hyleman, Williams has "assisted in the organization of several grazing groups and has been instrumental in developing educational programs for producers beginning in rotational grazing."

Williams serves as the Tioga County agricultural extension agent.

Tioga County dairy producer Jim Welch was given the outstanding pasture producer award. Welch intensively grazes 65 Holsteins on his farm located outside of Mansfield. He has hosted and been very active in local pasture walks. His herd has been the focus of several Penn State and USDA research projects to develop an information pool that will continue to help other graziers become better managers.

In addition to the award presentations, a short report highlighted the activities of the PFGC, including the awarding of scholarships, sponsorship of the Pennsylvania Crops Conference, and sponsored activities at Ag Progress Days.

Grazing, Weed Management

First on the agenda was a presentation on forage crop development by Dr. Marvin Hall, Penn State University Agricultural Economist.

Hall walked producers through the origin of growth of both grasses and legumes. In his talk he noted the importance of proper seedbed preparation.

"For a seed to germinate it must absorb 125 percent of its weight in water. That is why seed soil contact is critical," Hall said.

Managing alfalfa grass mixtures in fields is also challenging, Hall indicated, because of the different ways the plants grow.

Alfalfa grows from the top. In contrast, grass grows from the middle and constantly pushes itself up.

Hall advised that it is wise to understand how each species of grass or legume grows and where it stores its energy before harvesting it, to maintain the proper mix of plants.

Also on the agenda was a presentation on weed management in forage crops by Dr. Bill Curran, Penn State University Weed specialist.

Curran noted that weed control is most crucial in the year of establishing a new seeding.

"The forage yield from a particular field is forage plus the weeds that are in that field," said Curran as he showed some data from a study conducted at Rock Springs. "Weeds don't always affect yield, but they may impact quality."

Some quality issues to keep in mind include protein content, consumption of total digestible nutrients, possible toxins, and the increase in drying time of the crop.

Curran also added that finding a herbicide to use to control weeds in a mixed grass and legume stand can be challenging, but there are some available, especially on established stands. The bottom line, however, is if there are greater that 50 percent weeds in any given field, his recommendation is not to treat, but to rotate out of the crop.

In the afternoon session of the Quality Forage Conference the focus of the program turned to nutritional yield as Dr. Jerry Cherney, Cornell University forage specialist spoke on bringing the pieces of managing for quality forages together to get the most nutritional yield per acre.

Cherney was especially concerned with persistence in perennial forages and balancing yield with quality. Through feeding trials, Cherney gleaned that alfalfa was not a necessary part of a balanced ration to achieve top milk production.

He summed up his presentation with "what they say in New York. If you can't grow alfalfa, don't. Grow grass. If you can grow alfalfa, don't. Grow alfalfa grass mix."

Following Cherney's presentation was Penn State University Corn Specialist Greg Roth, who highlighted ways to manage varieties, crop rotations, fertility, and other factors.

"Corn Silage is an awful important forage in this state," Roth said, "and one that's received a lot of attention from those in the seed industry and the university. There are a lot of opportunities for improvement."

Roth touched on the problems associated with corn silage including the time and equipment investment associated with it. He he cautioned producers to maximize return per acre for the investment.

One way to maximize return on investment, Roth said, is to adopt an offensive approach to raising corn.

"There are some operations which can dedicate ground to produce specific crops, like corn for silage, or corn for grain and plant accordingly," he said.

However, even the best made plans don't always work, as Roth pointed out, when offensive plans turn defensive because of weather conditions and you might have to harvest the corn intended for silage as corn for grain.

Roth also noted that managing soil fertility is a major consideration and touted the benefits of soil testing.

Roth has also been involved in experiments to improve yield and quality of corn, especially in the Northeast. One study involves using a higher plant population and the other planting in narrower rows.

"I'm excited about the narrow row idea," said Roth. "I see some possibilities of improving yields, especially in northeast Pennsylvania."

Implementing narrow rows takes corn from a 30-inch row at 27,000 plants per acre to 15-inch rows and 34,000 plants per acre.

Roth also conceded that producers should weigh yield and quality requirements for their own herds before harvesting the corn.

"I think there are a lot of animals we're feeding corn silage to that don't need the high quality. If dairy heifers and dry cows get too high quality, it just makes them fat. Early lactation and high producing cows could benefit from higher digestibility in their corn silage. What we need to think about in the tradeoff between yield and quality is how are the animals we're going to feed this to going to use it? If they don't need high quality, let's go for yield all the way."

Other sessions included a program on "Grazing the Dairy Herd" by Dr. Steve Ford, Penn State University Agricultural Economist; "Optimization of Grazing Intensity" by Dr. Steven Fales, Penn State University forage specialist and agronomy department head; and "Harvesting Quality Forages on the Quillin Place" by Kentucky grazier Ralph Quillin.

The Quality Forage Conference was sponsored by Northeastern Farm Credit and the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council and hosted by the Endless Mountains and the Pocono Northeast RC&D.

Christmas Gift Becomes The Cow That Changed Their Lives

heifer would not breed, so his grandfather offered a replacement. She gave him five heifer calves and when he ultimately sold her as an aged cow, it was into another dairy herd for $1,000.

That was indicative of the marketing savvy that has now put Tidy Brook genetics in herds from Sweden and Denmark to Australia and New Zealand.

"We just milked cows when I was young," says this knowledgeable young dairyman. "No DHIA testing no classification." Testing was started during Alan's early teen-age years. With his growing interest in genetics, he pushed to begin classifying the cattle as well.

"I was intrigued with the genetics and their values and with indexed cows," Alan relates, adding that one of his goals early on was to put a bull in the studs. "I figured why just milk when you could make your basic cow much more valuable with type?"

The Ned Boy daughter he selected for his own as a young calf was from Tidy Brook's highest milking dam at the time. Tidy Brook Patent Sally. She completed a lifetime record fo 204,930 milk, 5675 fat and 5902 protein.

When Alan and Mark formed their partnership in 1986, his Ned Boy calf was one of the animals that Alan put back into the joint ownership. She calved at two years and wrapped up her first lactation with more than 30,000 pounds of milk. In addition, several of the farm's Ned Boy daughters were classified on a "set" for the bull stud and Sally earned a Good Plus-83 score. But it was her +70 protein index that would ultimately generate the most long-term interest in this prized cow family.

Meanwhile, Tidy Brook also had a crop of the original Leadman daughters, popular sire at the former Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, now Genex. That bought visitors with a Leadman interest in to visit the Tidy Brook herd.

"And we always kept our Ned Boy close so people would also get to see her," recalls Alan with a grin.

The strategy worked. In 1989, Tidy Brook signed its first contract for embryo transplant eggs from Ned Boy Sally, to be sired by Emprise Bell Elton. And the rest, as the saying goes, is pretty much history in the protein-index annals of registered Holstein genetics.

After two flushings for embryos, Ned Boy Sally was bred back to Southwind for a nautral calving. She calved at 3 years, 10 months with heifer twins and went on to complete a second lactation total of 41,000 milk, 1380 protein and 1370 fat.

"We're now merchandising the fourth generation of that family," Alan says. That includes some 80 bulls that have gone into service, domestically and internationally. Five are in Japan, some in Canada, at least one in Australia and several have been proven in France, though housed in the U.S.

An estimated 120 embryos are marketed annually to countries including Australia, New Zealand, France, Holland, Japan, Italy and England. Tours, many of them bringing international visitors, are a frequent part of the marketing end of Tidy Brook's dairy operation. One recent group included several Swedish dairy breeders who utilize Tidy Brook bulls in their herds.

Two years ago, their Tidy Brook Elton Sonja ranked as the third highest cow in the Holstein breed in pounds of protein. At the same time, Tidy Brook claimed one fourth, five of the top 20, of Holsteins in the breed for pounds of protein. On the January 1994 Active List, Tidy Brook bred four of the top five cows for PTA. And, currently they have two in the top 100 for TPI (Total Performance Index).

"We're trying to maintain the level of where our cows rank in CTPI (Cow Total Performance Index) for protein," notes Alan. A further goal continues to be having a high-proven Tidy Brook bull in the competitive commercial breeding market.

"Genetics is not an exact science," Alan is quick to say. "We're almost dealing with genetic oddities with animals that produce so well. Some pass it on in the female, some on the bull side. We know that ours pass their genetics along on the female side."

Alan does admit frustration over the reliability of some of the breed's popular sires and wishes that the "rapid rush of the genetics industry" could slow down a bit. Already, some breeding is being done by surgically removing eggs from three-month-old calves. fertilizing them invitro (in a lab culture dish), then implanting them into recipients. Thus, when a heifer calves as a two-year-old, she will already have offspring nearly as old as she is.

Box stalls were added to the barn after a partial collapse of the dairy housing area during last January's blizzard. The spacious stalls are ideal for the Meyers' calving and embryo-flushing needs. Tidy Brook Elton Shelby is pictured with Kendra and Alan.

In a more advanced, almost science-fiction, stages of cattle breeding research, Italian scientists are experimenting with in-vitro fertilization of eggs taken from calves that are still fetuses themselves. And in the future, Alan speculates that matings may be made based on genotypes, markers in the blood which show certain production traits and characteristics.

But while the science of breeding is making almost beyond — imagination strides in the lab, cattle breeders like the Meyers still have their herds and farming operations to maintain on a day-to-day basis. For Mark and Alan, that means the routines of caring for their 94-head herd with its current Rolling Herd Average of 19,740 milk. 746 fat and 625 protein, and carrying a classification BAA of 104.8.

Most of the farm's feed is raised on Tidy Brook's own 340 and 60 rented acres, cropped to corn, soybeans, alfalfa, grass hay, barley and some doubling with rye. A TMR feed is fed on a one-group basis, aiming at 75 pounds per cow daily average production.

Maintaining several "flush" cows offers a special challenge in feed and health management for those top type and production individuals held dry for long periods of time. According to Alan, ketosis and fatty liver problems are the most likely problems resulting from long dry periods.

After a few flushings of eggs, cows are bred to calve naturally. Ned Boy Sally, for instance, was calved naturally after flushings at 5 years, 6 months of age. Another of the herd's donor cows was also calved out more recently at well over five years and is doing well.

A partial collapse of the barn during last January's blizzard proved a blessing in disguise for the Meyers. When rebuilding, they added four spacious and very visible box stalls along one side of a loafing area. From there, cows can be easily seen and monitored more closely. The box stalls also provide an ideal calving area for Tidy Brook's valuable offspring, which are raised by the farm's longtime employee, Joel Mills.

"Joel is a magician with calves," Alan says with quick praise for the young man who grew up in the neighborhood and began helping at the farm as a youngster. By example, Alan points out two bull calves, each born premature at 8 months of age. Both are sturdy, healthy and thriving under Mill's exacting care.

Calves are given "clean" colostrum, saved from cows that have been tested as leucosis-free. Because export potential is limited if an animal tests leucosis-positive, the Meyers take that extra management step to avoid exposure to the blood disease, even through colostrum feeding.

Mark, Alan and Joel work as the dairying and crops team, while Kendra handles the financial records and the constant ringing of the telephone. She also does lots of public relations work for the herd, adding that extra touch of hospitality lent by having refreshments available while visitors look at the Tidy Brook cattle.

Merchandising and marketing the herd's genetics does demand extra time and investment. Both visitors and haulers may show up at almost any time, including when hay is on the ground or milking under way. Church, the children's ball games, even a family vacation may be missed or delayed due to customer demands.

"Paperwork, paperwork, paperwork!" Alan groans, is one of the most time-consumptive sides of international merchandising of cattle. Fortunately, their cattle-flushing vet, Larry Kennel, of Cornerstone Genetics, Mt. Joy, helps with much of the embryo, export, and testing paperwork requirements.

In addition, Alan estimates that the Meyers' local veterinarian is in to the farm at least twice weekly. And expenses for the extensive veterinary, testing and paperwork show up in the mail regularly, while income, especially sire sales, may be stretched over some length of time.

But the positive side of Tidy Brook's genetics marketing success far outweighs those negatives, according to Alan and Kendra. Getting that special, good cow for which there is a waiting genetics market is just one of the "up" sides of international marketing.

"The people, that's been the best part of it," they agree. Indeed, the Meyers count among their friends dairy breeders from across two oceans, Marketing has also given them an opportunity to travel and promote the Tidy Brook herd at international events such as the annual World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wisconsin and numerous nationally-known Holstein sales.

In mid-November, Alan and Kendra will travel to Sweden and Denmark with Worldwide Sires. They have been invited to make a slide presentation about Tidy Brook's genetics and farming operation at a series of meetings with European dairy producers, as well as visit a number of farms.

While relating his cattle breeding and marketing philosophy, Alan Meyers frequently repeats one word which he believes must be the foundation of genetics merchandising.

"Integrity," he firmly states. "Integrity is a big thing."

Along with that insistence on integrity in Tidy Brook's pedigrees and marketing. Alan is cognizant of the need to match the herd's genetics with market demands in the industry.

"We're breeding our cattle in the direction that we think has been most successful for us," he affirms. But Alan is realistic in recognizing that fast-changing trends in the dairy breeding business may not always be as favorable to Tidy Brook's genetics market as they are currently.

Baby calves get attentive and careful care, including first feedings of colostrum from leucosis-negative cows.

Especially pleasing to the Meyers family is that their cattle have done well in the herds of their customers. A Tesk-sired granddaughter of Ned Boy Sally, from her Cleitus daughter, sold as a calf to an Iowa dairy producer and milked as high as 140 pounds daily, while classifying Very Good-86. Another Tidy Brook animal went to a 500-head commercial dairy and proved to be the second-highest producing two-year-old in the herd's history.

And while they were attending World Dairy Expo a few weeks ago, a pleased customer related to Alan how a Tidy Brook calf he had purchased made a 30,000-pound record as a two-year-old.

Stories like that more than balance the myriad of management and paperwork details which daily challenge the Mark and Alan Meyers families basis as they successfully compete in an increasingly global dairy industry.

"We are very blessed," Alan smiles.

Grange Master

And none of the other organizations representing segments of rural and urban Pennsylvania are alone in supplying direction to the state Legislature.

The Grange is one of fewer than a handfull of respected state organizations whose policies are reviewed and consulted by state legislators.

Some of his goals include getting members to know the role that they play, "... and being able to say to themselves, 'Yes, we're part of what's going on.'"

Steel said he's looking to get a "spark" going, for more active roles from local leaders to help instill pride in organization and better inter-organizational communications.

For himself, he is getting a better understanding of the issues that arise in Harrisburg just by being a landowner.

He found out that the 10.5 acres he owns is a half-acre shy of qualifying for Act 319 (Clean and Green) because of local policy that deducts an acre of land automatically for the homestead; PennDOT wants to put in an "upgrade" on a trouble traffic route instead of the originally planned commuter route and will take half of his front yard; and his land is assessed at $2,000 per acre, while his father's is $200.

But his immediate task, he said, with only several weeks as master, is to make himself aware of the needs of local Granges, get Granges to discuss among themselves possible solutions to their problems and to work on behalf of the members to maintain and improve the respect of the Grange among others.

Four-State Farm Financial Management Workshops Set

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Thanks in part to satellite technology, farmers and farm partners in the Mid-Atlantic area will have opportunity to link up with Cooperative Extension Service farm management specialists in a series of six farm financial management workshops being conducted simultaneously throughout Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New York during the next three months.

The workshops are designed to help participants prepare financial statements and four-year plans in line with farm borrower requirements of the 1990 Farm Bill. A two-way satellite television portion of each workshop will feature Extension farm management specialists from Penn State University.

Wesley N. Musser, Extension farm management specialist at the University of Maryland at College Park, is the coordinator for the Maryland and Delaware workshops. Dr. Musser

Ag Plastics Headaches Mount As Disposal Problems Stymie Farmers

Part 1 of 2

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — "All the farmers have a problem," said Clark Stauffer as he pulled reams of black drip tape from the garbage pile. "That's our biggest problem — how do you get rid of it?"

At the fencerow in back of his vegetable farm in Ephrata, Clark Stauffer showed visitors the piles of mulch plastic and plastic drip tape he has accumulated.

Stauffer maintains about 25 acres of vegetables on his diversified operation northeast of Ephrata. He uses thin plastic polyethylene mulch film measuring about one millimeter thick (one thousandth of an inch, or one mil, as it is commonly known) in different colors.

Of the 25 acres, 20 are in sweet corn — and the first two early season acres are covered with the clear plastic film.

On the morning of a November day, after the plastic was pulled from the long rows in the field, a visiting Penn State plastics expert and an area young farmer adviser were discussing options for disposal of the plastic.

Trouble is, ways of getting rid of the used, soiled film are few and far between.

And the headaches of dealing with piles of leftover plastic, from forage growers to dairy farmers to vegetable producers across the state and the country, continue to mount.

Used ag plastics: You can't burn them. You can't bury them. They're hard to recycle. How do you get rid of them? Producers look for answers.

And farmers are worried that their options for getting rid of ag plastics continue to evaporate.

Ag plastic disposal "will become more of a problem," said Dale Hershey, Manheim dairy farmer.

Together with his brothers Clair and Steve, Dale operates a 400-acre dairy on his farm and manages 200 cows with an additional 300 replacement calves.

Like most dairy farmers, the Hersheys make extensive use of forage plastics, including a popular ag plastic wrap bag, and plastic bunker silo covers.

During an interview in November at his farm, Dale said his only option for disposing of plastics is to burn the material twice a week in an open, caged incinerator on his farm.

During an interview in November at his farm, Dale Hershey said his only option for disposing of plastics is to burn the material twice a week in this open, caged incinerator on his farm.

The headaches of dealing with piles of leftover plastic, from forage growers to dairy farmers to vegetable producers across the state and the country, continue to mount.

But producers who find themselves nearly enveloped by development are feeling the pressure to stop the burning in open pits or burn barrels.

'We need to find a solution. We need to put our heads together and come up with something that the farmer can live with.'

Dale said, "I wouldn't be surprised if there aren't regulations coming that will restrict how we burn, when we burn, and what we burn. Open burning is going to slowly come to an end in developed areas."

Twice a week, the Hersheys take plastic materials to their open pit caged incinerator. That includes plastics from 10 plastic wrap bags per year, a thick white plastic with a black lining measuring nine mils thick. The bags measure 8 feet in diameter by 200 feet.

'I got piles of that stuff. It's a big problem.'

The plastics also include bunker silo covers, measuring about nine mils thick placed over three silos. One silo measures 40 feet by 200 feet, another 30 feet by 180 feet, and one 55 feet by 125 feet.

'That's our biggest problem — how do you get rid of it?'

Many boroughs and townships, including Ephrata Boro, restrict homeowners and businesses from open burning. But they exempt farmers in most cases.

However, some townships can challenge the exemption and put restrictions on time when burning can take place. For the Hersheys, no open burning is allowed after sundown for fear of problems resulting from an unattended fire.

At the recent Animal Housing Expo in North Cornwall, Penn State's Ag and Bio Engineering Department featured a display advising farmers not to "cook your own goose."

"You shouldn't have to use a burn barrel approach to getting rid of your ag plastics," said James W. Garthe, Penn State ag engineer. "Unfortunately that ends up being the only one that works."

According to Garthe, the trouble lies in the products that aren't completely burned, or combusted, in an open pit.

Temperatures in a typical burn pit or burn barrel reach only between 400-500 degrees Fahrenheit — enough to burn paper trash — but resulting in poor enough burn conditions that products of incomplete combusion are emitted into the atmosphere. At these low temperatures, plastics cannot be sufficiently combusted.

Those "products of incomplete combustion," said Garthe, "are either carcinogenic or mutagenic." Simply put, those products can cause cancer in humans or mutations in human genes. The Clean Air Act lists seven criteria, or standard, pollutants, including air-suspended particulate matter, sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxides, two classes of hydrocarbons, and airborne lead.

In a paper presented at two in-service training sessions at Penn State in March this year, according to Garthe, the effects on human health from toxins in the area can be widespread and devastating. In the 1948 incident in Donora, Pa., and the 1952 killer smog in London (where there was an increase in death 1,600 times greater than normal), the long-range effect on human health from the pollutants could be even more pervasive.

Carbon monoxide can create conditions that can suffocate a person. Sulphur dioxide can cause permanent injury to the respiratory system. Photochemical oxidants can cause eye irritation, asthma attacks, and other problems. Particulates can cause lung lesions, respiratory disease, and damage to other organs.

Steel corrodes quicker in areas affected by particulate and sulfur pollution. Buildings deteriorate. Particulates soil clothes, cars, houses, and buildings.

The pollutants raise the ire of neighbors and can turn townships against farming.

Garthe stressed the importance of looking at those products of incomplete combustion. He said that an eminent human toxicologist — a scientist who studies how toxic these products can be to humans — made the point that ALL products of incomplete combustion are carcinogenic or mutagenic.

Farmers are worried that their options for getting rid of ag plastics continue to evaporate.

"It's a pretty strong statement," said Garthe. "If enough farmers are out there burning this stuff, you're getting enough of these products of incomplete combustion going into the air. I think the public has reasons to be concerned."

During the Animal Housing Expo, Garthe said that a producer came up to him and said the "solu-

"What plastic I use for the whole year I put in that pickup truck, wrapped, when I buy it," said Clark Stauffer, right. "But to unload it, with used plastic, it would take about five pickup trucks. We need to find a solution. We need to put our heads together and come up with something that the farmer can live with."

James Garthe, left, and others at Penn State agree. "That puts it on your shoulder," he said. "It's everybody's problem."

tion to pollution is dilution."

Trouble is, according to the ag engineer, "if you go back 100 years ago, you could burn anything you pleased. And there was such a large land mass that the pollutants could be assimilated by nature. The acids that were created would dissipate and there would be no harm done."

Section 129.14 addressing Open Burning Operations, Section C under "Exceptions," farmers are exempt from township or borough open burning restrictions when such burning relates to, in Paragraph 4, "A fire set in conjunction with the production of agricultural commodities in their unmanufactured state on the premises of the farm operation."

'I wouldn't be surprised if there aren't regulations coming that will restrict how we burn, when we burn, and what we burn. Open burning is going to slowly come to an end in developed areas.'

Today urban areas are on the increase. More farms are surrounded by development. This pressure has created more population with less open land to absorb it.

Also, 100 years ago most farm materials were corn shocks, grain stubble, or leftover plant material from vegetable or tobacco harvest. Materials included wood material, burlap seed bags, and other products made from wood — not plastic, which is made from petroleum products.

Garthe indicated that producers must be aware of the phrase "unmanufactured state."

'You shouldn't have to use a burn barrel approach to getting rid of your ag plastics.'

The real problem for farmers may lie in the future: what if townships decided to take the literal interpretation of the law?

In the Pennsylvania Code Title 25 of DER Regulations current through March 11, 1995, Under

At the fencerow in back of his vegetable farm in Ephrata, Clark Stauffer showed visitors the piles of mulch plastic and plastic drip tape he has accumulated.

Forage wrap use has grown exponentially on many farms. James Garthe, Penn State ag engineer, believes that, someday, forage plastics will be made edible and could be fed along with the forage.

use of molasses or other material to cover silo bunkers. But plastic manufacturers and producers agree: plastics are handy, inexpensive, versatile, durable, and here to stay.

Garthe believes that, someday, forage plastics will be edible and

'Those "products of incomplete combustion,"' said Garthe, 'are either carcinogenic or mutagenic.'

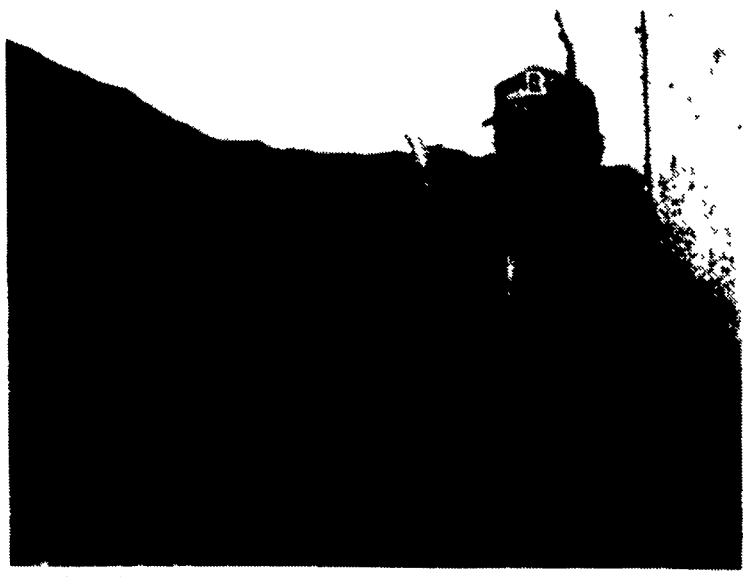
Is plastic in an "unmanufactured state"?

Garthe and other engineers think not.

But now that the use of plastics has grown exponentially (one young farmer adviser said that plastic use in Lancaster County alone is way up — about 30 to 40 percent — from a couple of years ago), is there any going back?

Some producers remember the



The plastics also include bunker silo covers, measuring about nine mils thick placed over three silos. One silo measures 40 feet by 200 feet, another 30 feet by 180 feet, and one 55 feet by 125 feet. Dale Hershey shows visitors the bunker silo cover.

could be fed along with the forage.

In the meantime, what about the endless piles of used and soil-filled mulch plastics, not to mention the plastic containers that once contained detergents for the milkhouse?

In the case of the Hersheys, the 5-, 10-, 35-, and 55-gallon white plastic containers sit in a pile in back of the milkhouse.

Dale said that he wouldn't mind simply leaving them near the farm, at the side of the road, for neighbors to pick up. But most of the time the jugs, when they get piled too high, are burned with the rest of the forage bag plastics and other farm trash.

ALL products of incomplete combustion are carcinogenic or mutagenic.

"One hundred years ago you could burn anything and nobody knew about it," said Garthe. "But now that has changed. And you have neighbors that will complain."

Meanwhile, the used plastic continues to pile up. One Berks County dairy farmer who uses more plastics than ever before was afraid to give his own name, for fear of concerns about ag plastics disposal.

"I don't like to say it too loud, with the neighbors and everything," he said. "But we burn it."

Another who wished to remain anonymous said, "I got piles of that stuff. It's a big problem."

"Plastic use this year is way up," said Jeff Stoltzfus, New Holland area young farmer adviser. "Amish farmers are stuffing (the plastic wrap bags) with little bales of hay wrapped in plastic. That's really popular this year."

This year was especially challenging because of the nearly constant rain during the summer.

"Everybody wrapped hay this year," said Stoltzfus. "It was the only way you could make hay."

"Everybody asks everybody else, how do you get rid of it?" said vegetable grower Clark Stauffer. "Some townships allow you to burn."

Stauffer showed farm visitors the empty area in the bed of his pickup truck, which he uses extensively on the farm.

"What plastic I use for the whole year I put in that pickup truck, wrapped, when I buy it," he said. "But to unload it, with used plastic, it would take about five pickup trucks. We need to find a solution. We need to put our heads together and come up with something that the farmer can live with."

Garthe and others at Penn State agree. "That puts it on your shoulder," he said. "It's everybody's problem."

Next week: Recycling options exist but they are limited. Farmers are working together to come up with solutions to the ag plastic disposal dilemma. The final part of the series will examine those solutions.

Recycling options exist but they are limited. Farmers are working together to come up with disposal solutions to ag plastics. The final part of the series will examine those solutions. Here, about two acres of mulch film in Lebanon County.

However, some townships can challenge the exemption and put restrictions on time when burning can take place. For the Hersheys, no open burning is allowed after sundown for fear of problems resulting from an unattended fire. Dale Hershey places waste into the cage.

Record International Numbers, Youth Involvement Highlight Fourth World Beef Expo

MADISON, Wis. — One-hundred and twenty-five visitors from 28 countries were part of the fourth World Beef Expo Oct. 10-12 here at the Dane County Expo Center. During the three-day event, almost 1,400 cattle from 21 states and two Canadian provinces were exhibited in 15 open shows and the junior show. Attendance figures for this year's Expo totaled 14,000 for three days.

The show kicked off the largest attended Stockman's School, a new pickup truck show, and continued with a 310-booth commercial exhibit show and craft show.

More than 300 youths participated in the seven contests that made up the "Spirit" Sweepstakes. The top four contest scores of each participant were used to determine their sweepstakes placing. The sweepstakes included contests of speech, quiz, showmanship, practical herdsmanship, beef evaluation, steer show, and heifer show.

Jessica Arp of Arlington, Wis. took home top honors in the junior division along with $200 in first place money. Rounding out the top five in the junior division were Emily Hartzell, Shawano, Wis., second place; Blake Bloomberg, Berwick, Ill., third place; Willie Abrahamzon, Houston, Minn., fourth place; and Cody Quam, Lodi, Wis., fifth place. The senior division champ was Jordon Redalen of Fountain, Minn., who receives $700 for the honor. Second place went to Kurt Lehman, Reedsburg, Wis.; third place was Wess Richey, Plymouth, Ind., fourth place was Cara James, Pardeeville, Wis.; and fifth place went to Nathan Frederickson of Starbuck, Minn.

Ardel Quam of Marda Angus Farms in Lodi, Wis. was named the fourth recipient of the World Beef Expo Paul May Award. The Award, named after its first recipient, is given to an individual who has dedicated a lot of time and energy to World Beef Expo. Quam, an executive committee member of World Beef Expo, is also one of the event's founders. She also serves as the cattle sale superintendent.

Wolfgang M. Hanau of West Palm Beach, Fla. cooked his way to the top for the World Beef Expo Cook-Off with his Light Tai-Mex Enchiladas recipe. He took home a cash prize of $2,000. More than 400 recipes were received from 32 states.

With five sales reporting, a total of $260,125 was generated in the cattle sales during World Beef Expo '96. The top-selling animal among all the sales was a Simmental heifer, GLS 91X Black Obsessions, which sold for $6,500. She was consigned by Grass-Lunning Simmentals of LeRoy, Minn. and purchased by Ayers Simmentals of Snyder, Okla. The two new sales at this year's show included a Prospect Sale and the Ladies of the 90's World Edition.

This year's show also included a special World Beef Expo Celebrity Steer Show and Sale. The five donated steers, shown by celebrity "Mayors," were sold with half of the proceeds going to a charity of the celebrity's choice and half of each sale price going to support World Beef Expo. Buyers included Gold Medal Trailer Sales, The Dry Bean Saloon and Smokehouse, and Badgerland Farm Credit Services.

NFO Testifies For Basic Price

AMES, Iowa — In an effort to establish fair prices for American dairy farmers, National Farmers Organization President Gene Paul testified before the USDA Basic Formula Price Committee at its forum in Madison, Wis., recently.

"National Farmers Organization has and will continue to advocate that producer milk prices be based on dairy producers' actual milk production costs," Paul said in testimony. A number of producers, farm organizations and dairy cooperatives also testified. "Dairy farmers must work together to obtain milk prices that cover their production costs.

"This will maintain a strong producer base and be an economic benefit to local communities and throughout the country," Paul emphasized. Dairy producers take their farm and personal business into their local towns and cities, boosting small businesses and rural economies.

A letter announcing the public forum posed the question, "Should a BFP be based on manufactured dairy products?"

"The answer is an emphatic no," Paul said.

A price for raw milk determined by a formula using manufactured dairy products has three components, the product price, yield factors and make allowances, he explained. Yield factors indicate the amount of milk needed to produce one pound of cheese. The industry standard is that making one pound of cheese requires 10 pounds of raw milk. The make allowance is the amount of money USDA allows for processing raw milk into cheese.

This measurement inaccurately reflects the raw milk supply-demand environment. Unlike manufactured products, raw milk's shelf life is extremely short. Therefore, a formula using manufactured dairy products overestimates supply of raw milk.

Paul explained a change that has occurred in Grade A and Grade B milk markets in the dairy industry over the last 30 years.

"There is much less Grade B milk in Minnesota and Wisconsin," he said. That has resulted in the industry co-mingling the milk with Grade A on the same truck to keep hauling costs down.

"The quality of Grade B milk is similar to Grade A quality," Paul said. "It has to be. It is co-mingled with Grade A, and delivered to manufacturing plants that expect milk of Grade A quality."

Grade B producers average 1,288 pounds per day less than the Grade A producers. Grade B dairy farmers also tend to be older and closer to retirement. Thus they are less likely to make capital improvements regarding water and well requirements so their operations may be shifted to Grade A.

Because of these factors, competition for Grade A milk increased, while competition for Grade B milk decreased, Paul said.

Plants continually paid more for Grade A milk for use in manufacturing in comparison to the Minnesota/Wisconsin price or the BFP. Accordingly, any accurate pricing mechanism establishing a base milk price should integrate the price of Grade A milk used in manufacturing plants.

"A BFP based on competitive pay prices for Grade A and Grade B milk in the Midwest and Upper Midwest should automatically adjust for the factors affecting milk supply and demand, including that of products manufactured from milk," Paul said.

"The current BFP or product price formula, do not and would not provide a reliable or timely indication of supply-demand shifts," Paul said. National Farmers submitted a proposal to the BFP Committee, addressing concerns facing today's dairy producers.

A recent independent study of the National Cheese Exchange in Green Bay, Wis., found that although only ½ of one percent of all bulk cheese transactions occur on the NCE, it sets the price for 90 to 95 percent of the cheese. And nine traders, such as Kraft, accounted for 94 percent of all sales and purchases from 1988 to 1993 on the NCE.

The report on the NCE advised establishing a more competitive price discovery mechanism. It confirmed that, at best, prices set through regulations based on cash commodity markets will yield prices paid to producers that do not cover their production costs. National Farmers supported the study findings.

"It seems natural that cheese prices in Wisconsin would be viewed as a national cheese price," Wisconsin National Farmers President Ken Lindquist said in his testimony. "The National Cheese Exchange prices do not represent what cheese actually sells for in Wisconsin or nationally."

These inaccurate NCE prices are then reported throughout the dairy industry by USDA and others as being a price for cheese, Lindquist added.

"The National Cheese Exchange, by its own admission, was not designed to be a national cheese pricing mechanism," Lindquist said, "At times the Exchange has even characterized itself as a disposal system for surplus cheese."

If the prices of butter and cheese are to be used in the Federal Order to determine the butterfat and protein component prices, and as a mechanism to update the Basic Formula Price, it is essential that the prices are accurate," Paul said. The national president explained that it must be an average value, including both the high and the low prices, for wholesale dairy products. And an audit needs to verify that plants actually receive the dollars reported as having been paid, Paul said.

Federal Credit Program For Ag Exporters

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A federal credit guarantee program designed to help those exporting United States-produced agricultural products is available to Pennsylvanians, and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Market Development is set to help potential exporters understanding the program and apply for funding.

According to a PDA news release made this week, state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius wants to bring this program to the attention of Pennsylvania farmers and others interested in exporting agricultural products, because it can help provide confidence in establishing an export trade deal, especially when the importer is in "an emerging economy."

"The Ridge administration is committed to expanding export opportunities for our agricultural products, and the credit guarantee program will allow more flexibility in financing agreements with emerging economies," Brosius said in the release. "The program will support our exporters who are seeking to increase market share."

The news release comes after the ambassador of Mexico recently met in Harrisburg with Brosius and other leaders of Pennsylvania agriculture to discuss trade issues between Pennsylvania and Mexico.

The guaranteed credit program — the Supplier Credit Guarantee Program — was authorized under the 1996 Farm Bill and guarantees payment from importers, for up to 180 days.

The program covers short-term financing extended directly by exporters to foreign buyers, for up to 180 days, the news release stated. It requires only that importers obtain a promissory note in case of default on the Commodity Credit Corporation-backed payment guarantee.

The first use of the program is to cover sales to Mexico, on a first-come, first-served basis, for up to $20 million in guaranteed credit.

Commodities included are dairy products, fruits and vegetables, potatoes, wine, and tree nuts.

Exporters may apply for any unused allocation if they are to export before Dec. 31.

Starting next year, trade with other countries is possibly to begin under the program.

For more information, call the PDA Bureau of Market Development, at (717) 783-3181.

Custom Fitting Milk And Dairy Products

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Cooperative Extension
Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

The custom fitting of milk and dairy products is not a conscious goal for most dairy farmers, at least not directly. Yet all efforts toward increasing profitability on the dairy farm indirectly take custom fitting into consideration. Custom fitting is simply what the consumer wants to buy, or what the milk producer is able to sell and tries to produce more of. If there is no demand for a certain product from the dairy farm, then there is no point in producing it.

The U.S. Holstein cow is proof that dairy farmers are actually custom fitting to the consumer demands. In the last 30 years, Holstein cow's milk has become the predominant cow's milk in the United States, chosen over Jersey, Guernsey, Ayrshire, Brown Swiss and Milking Shorthorn cow's milk. Holstein milk is naturally low in fat, lower than that of the other breeds.

In recent years, as an incentive for dairy farmers to produce more of that content in milk that consumers preferred, the U.S. dairy industry affixed a price differential or bonus for protein or solids-not-fat or cheese yield content of milk.

The debate about fat and cholesterol in milk has been going on for some time. The consumer, meanwhile, has switched away from whole milk, opting instead for low-fat 2 percent, 1 percent or skim milk. This trend did not come from the farm directly, but was prompted by milk processors offering consumers a choice on the grocery shelf. Even in the processing of milk for cheese, consumer interest in low-fat products has had a considerable influence on newly available cheese varieties.

The situation of American consumers offers an interesting comparison — in the opposite direction — to the nutritional needs of American dairy cows. Many Americans are not working as hard physically as they did 50 to 100 years ago, before the age of the automobile and mechanization. Because they use less energy, they require less fat in their daily diets. American dairy cows, on the other hand, are working harder physically. At 100+ pounds-milk yield per day, cows need much more energy, which is available only in the form of fat.

However, one fat is not equal to another fat. Fat is a general term applied to a big family of different constituents with many different qualities and characteristics. Another name for our food fats is "triglyceride," which explains that fat normally consists of one part glycerol and three parts fatty acids all hooked together. These fatty acids can be very different, thereby making up different fat qualities in the end.

Fatty acids are so-called "saturated" or "unsaturated" biochemically, which means differences in their actions in our body's digestion, metabolism and health, Fatty acids also have different lengths — short, medium or long — depending on the number of atoms in their molecular chains.

Research has cast unfavorable shadows over the saturated fatty acids, which are present in all fats and oils in varying amounts. Consumers can read the nutrition label on products before picking the one they prefer. It is not that all saturated fatty acids are bad; it is more a matter of how much one eats of them. And not all of these fatty acids are from fat in the diet. The body makes fat from excess sugar and starch.

Unsaturated fatty acids have received positive attention in recent years from research, which biochemically distinguishes between monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fatty acids. It has been determined that while the body needs these unsaturated fatty acids, only a small amount is needed daily, much less than the typical daily intake by Americans.

Also, it has been found that the body needs much less of the polyunsaturated fatty acids than is currently being eaten. Their high level of consumption is actually detrimental to good health.

I went to neighborhood food markets and checked the nutrition labels for contents of all available oils for mono- and polyunsaturated fatty acids. This information is all there in plain English, but does anybody bother to read it? In talking to some of the store managers, I found that few of them seem to know or care about what the differences mean.

Assuming that you take the research message seriously and that you want to custom fit your shopping to buy high monounsaturated fatty acid contents rather than high polyunsaturated fatty acid contents, which oils should you choose?

Here is a table of my label checking:

Unsaturated fatty acids in grams per tablespoon of 14 grams oil

| | Mono- | Poly- |
|---|---|---|
| Safflower oil | 2 | 11 |
| Corn oil | 3 | 8 |
| Soybean oil | 3 | 8 |
| Walnut oil | 2.5 | 10 |
| Flax (linseed oil) | 3 | 10 |
| Cottonseed oil | 4 | 3 |
| Sesame oil | 5 | 6 |
| Peanut oil | 7 | 4 |
| Canola oil | 8 | 4 |
| Grape seed oil | 8 | 4 |
| Almond oil | 9 | 4 |
| Avocado oil | 10 | 1 |
| Olive oil | 10 | 1.5 |
| Macadamia oil | 11 | 1 |

As you can see, consumers have a tremendous choice of fats and can determine from product labels what they need for a healthy diet is not difficult.

What about the other characteristic of fats, the chain length of fatty acids, for example? This information is not found on the nutrition labels. Does it matter? When you know what the difference means to your body, you will agree that it matters a lot.

The short- and medium-chain length fatty acids are not digested to form fat in the body like the long-chain fatty acids do. Instead, they are broken down during digestion to provide direct energy. Butter contains significant amounts of short- and medium-chain length fatty acids - more than most other fat sources - and thus is a preferred fat source for people who do not want to gain body fat. Short- and medium-weight chain fatty acids also have other well-documented antimicrobial, anti-fungal and anti-tumor properties. They have been used as treatment for digestive malabsorption, unthriftiness of children, to strengthen the immune system and to lower cholesterol contents and deposition in tissues.

New South Dakota research published in the Journal of Dairy Science, July 1996, p. 1127-1136 and 1244-1249 shows that by changing the feeding of cows, you can custom-fit the fatty acid composition of milk and butter to suit the needs of the consumers better than before. The experimental cow ration in the South Dakota research contained either soybean oil meal or extruded soybeans or

DRPC Raleigh Holds Annual Meeting

CHARLESTON, S.C. — The annual meeting of DRPC Raleigh was held November 1 and 2, 1996 in Charleston, SC. Highlighting the meeting was a formal approval of the merger between DRPC Raleigh and Mid-States DRPC located in Ames, Iowa. Computer processing for the entire region formerly serviced by these two organizations will be transferred to Raleigh in stages to be completed in mid 1997.

Operations to be handled both in Raleigh and Ames include report printing, editing, corrections, data entry, program training and support. The current service area for Ames personnel includes Heart of America DHIA, Dairy Lab Services and Colorado DHIA. Additional DHIA Affiliates in the region will be added to the Ames service area in late 1997 or 1998.

An implementation schedule for the merger included modifying DHIA reports to include additional data, programming and training efforts, and additional materials for education and training. Ken Butcher, director of DRPC Raleigh, and Greg Palas, director of Mid-States DRPC were appreciative of the cooperative efforts among DRPC staff, DHIA Affiliate staff and university personnel in the region. They noted that continued support will be needed until all stages of the merger are completed on October 1, 1997.

Other items discussed at the Annual Meeting included a proposal to work jointly with the Holstein Association to enhance the PCDART system with add-on programs specific to the needs of registered breeders. Joint marketing of PCDART will also be considered. The delegates approved continued evaluation by DRPC and Holstein staff.

Major accomplishments for DRPC Raleigh were reviewed. The addition of DHI record processing for Northeast DHIA in April increased processing volume by 45%. Ken Butcher acknowledged the extra effort from DRPC employees to accommodate Northeast DHIA. He also thanked the Northeast DHIA personnel and producers for their cooperation during the transition and for their continued support.

PCDART development in 1996 included the addition of Graphic Analysis, completion of PCDART for consultants, and enhancements to allow DHI Technicians to use PCDART. Enrollment of producers using PCDART has increased this year by 22%.

A new Advisory Board was elected for the merged organization. Dairy producers elected to the board included John Finke from Indiana, Alton Ling from Missouri, Kim Harvey from Vermont, Eubert Correll from North Carolina, Brown Dean from Georgia, and Steve Hershey from Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. DHI and extension staff elected to the board include: Dave Sukup, manager of Heart of American DHIA; Bob Damm, manager of Dairy Lab Service Lab Services; and Monty Montgomery on the extension staff at University of Tennessee. The Advisory Board's next meeting is on December 8, 1996 in conjunction with the National DHIA Leadership Conference in Clearwater, FL.

Lancaster County — The Next Los Angeles? Part II

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry, in cosponsorship with the Farm and Home Foundation, will present Town Meeting II on Thursday, December 12. This program was introduced last year as an opportunity for citizens of Lancaster County to express their views and concerns about the ever-growing number of issues surrounding the use of our land. These include a range of difficulties from those faced by businesses encountering difficult and occasionally conflicting township ordinances to those faced by farm and housing-development neighbors. Preserving the viability and sustainability of agriculture in Lancaster County continues to be a top priority of many organizations, but the many related issues continue to surface in urban/suburban areas.

This program is an effort to relieve the strains of urban/rural interface and keep Lancaster County from becoming a municipal battleground. Like last year's successful meeting on farming and the future of agriculture, attendees will be given the opportunity to express opinions and/or ask questions about property rights, zoning, and the future of agriculture in Lancaster County.

Speakers for the evening include John Becker and Stan Limbeck from Pennsylvania State University, who will give in-depth presentations on property rights and the zoning hearing process. A panel discussion follows their presentations. Dr. John Schwartz of the Penn State Extension will give his perspectives on the structure and future of Lancaster's farms. Ronald Bailey, Lancaster County Planning Commission, will discuss "planning versus taking" of land in the county. Roger Rohrer, a Strasburg farmer and vice president of ag lending for CoreStates Bank, will talk about compensation for public use of private property.

Town Meeting II will be held at the Farm and Home Center from 7 to 9 p.m. For more information call Jim Shirk at the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry at 397-3531, ext. 62.

Custom Fitting Milk

sunflower seeds as a major portion of the concentrate ration. This influenced the fatty acid composition of the milk from the cows fed that ration and significantly changed the cheddar cheese composition made from that milk.

Extruded soybeans or sunflower seeds in the ration increased the milk contents of unsaturated fatty acids and decreased the contents of short- and medium-chain length fatty acids compared to the ration containing soybean oil meal. The proportion of monounsaturated fatty to polyunsaturated fatty acids actually increased. There is also other research information that shows that you can use genetic differences between breeds of dairy animals, especially in the amounts of short- and medium-chain length fatty acids.

Thus with different feeding methods of dairy animals and genetic selection, dairy producers can now custom-fit milk and dairy products to suit the specific fat and fatty acid preferences of consumers according to their health needs. This is new and valuable information for the future of our dairy industry.

Farmers Reveal Practices That Protect Water, Help Cows

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — On a recent conservation tour, two dairy farm families demonstrated how storing manure and protecting pasture streams have been affordable steps to protecting water quality.

Better manure management has even helped one farm replace chemical fertilizers without a production drop in high-yielding corn.

Leon Kurtz explained to 20 tour participants how a new manure storage area and concrete barnyard pad installed this spring promise to yield multiple benefits.

"We will be able to see returns on this investment in reductions in veterinary bills," he said. "The concrete pad should reduce foot problems and mastitis especially with all the rain we received this year."

The rain spouting on the barn roof diverts water off the pad. Kurtz said, "The concrete pad has reduced the amount of labor for cleaning the barnyard, and keeps manure sediment and nutrients from entering the Brandywine Creek."

Wayne Carvell, the Chesapeake Bay engineer for Chester, Lancaster, and Berks counties, helped design the technical components of the manure storage area and the concrete pad. The total cost was $12,000. Kurtz paid $8,000 and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service gave $4,000 in cost share money for the project.

"The Chesapeake Bay Program works with farmers to give them what they want," said Ken Wilson, a Chesapeake Bay technician. The most important component in designing the project is the input from the farmer, because he has to work with the system every day.

Leon and Sarah Kurtz manage their 110-acre farm with the help of their three sons. They milk 51 dairy cows and have 50 replacement animals.

"The manure storage area allows us to do a better job of conserving nutrients," Leon said. "We only have to haul manure in the spring and fall. For the past two years we have fertilized our fields with manure and we are harvesting 170-200 bushels of corn per acre. This is the same amount we harvested with chemical fertilizers."

Pennsylvania's nutrient management law was a topic of discussion at the farm tour. Pennsylvania's nutrient management regulations are being finalized and will be in effect in early 1997, according to Kate Woytowich, nutrient management technician for Chester County.

The law will require farmers with more than two animal units per acre to have a nutrient management plan. Each animal unit is 1,000 pounds of live weight. Woytowich will be able to write nutrient management plans for free until the law is in effect.

Agricultural consultants can also write nutrient management plans for a fee or, a farmer can become certified to do the plan for their farm. The certification is good for three years.

Woytowich said, "The farmer will have one year to implement the plan." This is a good tool for farmers to save money by applying the correct amount of nutrients on their land. There are approximately 130 farms in Chester County that are considered a concentrated animal operation, and will therefore require nutrient management plans.

Jerry Martin from the Pequea-Mill Creek Project in Lancaster County gave a presentation about the farmstead evaluation. According to Martin, "The Farmstead Evaluation is a tool farmers can use to determine what affect their farmstead has on water quality. There are six different areas addressed in the evaluation. Landowners can use the eight-page booklet themselves or with the help of someone else."

Lori Sandman from the Dairy Network Partnership said, "We will be using the farmstead evaluation in various projects to help us identify areas on farmsteads that may be contributing to water quality problems as well as to recognize excellence in environmental stewardship."

The Ken and Marilyn Umble farm was the second stop on the tour. They farm 175 acres and milk 81 dairy cows. The Umble's were awarded the Conservation Farmers of the Year for 1995 in Chester County.

Streambank fencing and three stream crossings were installed two years ago to protect the banks of the stream and keep the cattle out of the water at a cost of $5,025. The Chesapeake Bay Program paid 80 percent of the project cost. Hog slats were used for the crossings.

According to Umble, since the crossings and fencing were installed, there have been no problems with maintenance of the fencing. The benefits noticed include improved herd health, stabilization of the streambank, improved water quality, and an increase in wildlife.

The farm tour was sponsored by the Chester County Conservation District and the Dairy Network Partnership.

PDA, Six Counties Receive Funds For Farmland Protection

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Six counties and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) received $1.6 million to fund existing farmland preservation programs to protect the state's most vulnerable farmland.

Pennsylvania's allotment was second only to California's, which received $1.9 million during the first year of the newly-created, national Farmland Protection Program, recently authorized in the 1996 Farm Bill.

PDA received $1 million and the six counties — Adams, Bucks, Chester, Lancaster, Lebanon and York — received $100,000 each to fund existing state and local farmland preservation programs, said Janet L. Oertly, state conservationist for the Natural Resources Conservation Service.

NRCS, a U.S. Department of Agriculture agency, administers the program. In addition, NRCS will provide technical assistance, including working with PDA and the counties to develop conservation plans for farms accepted into the program, she said.

Thirty-two landowners in 12 counties will enter nearly 7,000 acres into farmland preservation programs using the recently received federal funds, Oertly said. PDA is using its money to fund projects in additional counties, including Berks, Mifflin, Union. Northampton, Susquehanna and Schuylkill, she added.

PDA and the counties agree to provide their own funds to help purchase development rights from farmers to keep productive farmland in use, Oertly added.

Under the program, USDA enters into agreements with state or local governments to support their efforts to protect farmland through the purchase of easements. USDA will provide up to 50 percent of the cost of purchasing these easements.

To participate, landowners must agree to limit the use of their land for nonagricultural purposes.

Several criteria exist for eligible farmland, including that the land must be part of the pending offer from a state or local farmland protection program; privately owner; have a conservation plan; be large enough to sustain agricultural production; and be accessible to markets for what the land produces.

USDA distributed $14.5 million to 18 states through the Farmland Protection Program. With the share from state, county and local programs, USDA estimates the $14.5 million nationwide will be increased to approximately $55 million, which will be made available to protect our best farmland.

Total funding for the Farmland Protection Program is $35 million over six years. Only states with existing state and local farmland preservation programs were eligible to apply for funding through the federal program this year.

NASDA Commends Congress, Clinton Administration

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA) has commended Congress and the Clinton administration for reforming the nation's pesticide regulation (H.R. 1627) and drinking water protection laws (S. 1316).

H.R. 1627 ends a decade old debate on how to establish a scientific standard for setting pesticide tolerances, and S. 1316 recognizes whole farm/ranch natural resource management plans as a tool producers can use to protect drinking water sources.

"NASDA has sought changes to pesticide regulation for some time," Richard W. Kirchhoff, executive vice president and CEO of NASDA, said. "The Food Quality Protection Act of 1996 provides a process to establish uniform pesticide tolerances based on sound science rather than the outdated Delaney Clause."

H.R. 1627 replaces the zero-risk standard, the Delaney Clause, with a narrative "safe" or negligible risk standard which provides that a "reasonable certainty that no harm will result from the aggregate exposure to the pesticides chemical residue, including all dietary exposures and all other exposures and all other exposures for which there is reliable information."

Kirchhoff said that the 10-fold safety factor included in the measure will assure the safety of infants, children, and other "at risk" populations.

"Protecting the health and welfare of the consuming public is the highest calling for state agricultural officials," he said, adding that "special efforts must be taken to ensure the safety of children."

Consideration of a pesticide's benefits could be used in the continuatioin of a tolerance for an eligible pesticide chemical residue if the pesticide protects humans from adverse public health risks greater than the dietary risk, and/or the use is necessary for the production of an adequate, wholesome, and economical food supply. Pesticide benefits can not be used to register a new chemical.

The new law also provides for national uniformity for federal pesticide residue tolerances except in instances where a state successfully petitions EPA to set its own tolerance in response to a compelling local condition or an unreasonable public health risk in the state, or where a state wishes to set its own tolerance for a pesticide whose tolerance was established under benefits consideration.

Kirchhoff also applauded the changes made by H.R. 1627 to the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Ave (FIFRA). Specifically he said the "provisions designed to correct the 'minor use' problem created by the 1988 FIFRA amendments would benefit agriculture production."

With regards to minor uses, the new law would:

- Extend the period of exclusive use of date supporting a minor use registration by the original registrant;
- Require the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to provide additional time for the submission of residue chemistry date support registration or reregistration of minor use pesticides;
- Authorize EPA to waive data requirements for a minor use pesticide if it would not adversely affect risk assessment or have an unreasonable effect on the environment;
- Require expeditious review and action on complete applications for registration or reregistration of minor use pesticides;
- Require EPA to defer for 180 days a decision regarding a voluntary cancellation of a registration that might adversely effect the availability of the pesticide for a minor use;
- Require EPA to process an application for a minor use without regard to any pending request to voluntarily cancel a substantially similar pesticide use; and
- Establish a program at EPA to coordinate activities related to minor use pesticides.

With regard to S. 1316, the bill which reauthorized the Safe Drinking Water Act (SDWA), NASDA Director of Legislative and Regulatory Affairs, Mark C. Nestlen, said the voluntary source water petition program would provide states an opportunity to enhance programs which protect the nation's drinking water supply.

"In passing the bill, lawmakers recognized that states need the flexibility to develop partnerships between landowners and the government in order to enhance this precious natural resource," he told the annual meeting of the Associaiton of American Plant Food Control Officials (AAPFCO) in San Diego, Ca.

Nestlen specifically referenced the provision of the bill which recognizes the use of total Resource Management Plans (RMPS) as a tool to meet the requirements of any source water protection program.

"Whole farm and ranch plans are the best tool available for producers to enhance protection of drinking water," he said. "The voluntary source water protection program in New York state, which is based on whole farm plans, proves the success of this concept."

The NASDA representative said that a combination of the resource plan provisions of the SDWA and the cost-share programs of the 1996 Farm Bill will enhance the management of natural resources.

"If USDA allows for the creation of Resource Management Plans as a means to implement the conservation programs of the 1996 Farm Bill, then the tool will assist farmers and ranchers in complying with the Safe Drinking Water Act," he concluded.

'NASDA is a nonprofit association of public officials representing the commissioners, secretaries, and directors of agriculture in the 50 states and four territories.

New York Farm Bureau Holds Annual Meeting

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau President John Lincoln said today that he sees a rosier picture for New York agriculture in the next century if farmers can: be assured of the best in cutting age information and technology; enhance their opportunities through market expansion; educate consumers about modern food production; and continue to bring down farm expenses.

In his speech to the hundreds of farm leaders attending the State Annual Meeting of the 27,000 member New York Farm Bureau at the Holiday Inn-Genesee Plaza in Rochester, Lincoln said he sees Farm Bureau taking the lead at making agriculture more profitable in the new millennium as it has in the 20th Century.

To gear up for the next century, Lincoln said, "We must help nonfarmers to know that farming is no longer like the 'Old MacDonald's Farm' they learned about as a child. Farmers will, more than ever before, need to tell agriculture's story to a public whose agricultural roots are nothing more than a tattered picture in a photo album handed down from one generation to the next. Agriculture is ever-changing. Farmers are embracing new technologies and diversifying their farm to remain profitable."

He added, "Nonfarmers need to know that agriculture is good for the local tax base, the envirvonment, and the economy. Farmers are part of a local community's landscape ... and part of a community's future."

According to Lincoln, "Another challenge for the future involves market development. We have worked to cut farm expenses. We now need to bolster the income side of agriculture." As other states are already doing, Lincoln said farmers need "to remind New Yorkers what foods are grown locally and let consumers beyond our borders know what we have to offer. We will have to be more aggressive in going after new customers than ever before ... and state government can help."

The Farm Bureau leader stated, "Without growth, New York agriculture will slowly shrivel up and die. New York slipped from the 21st to the 27th largest agricultural state since 1989. We must turn this lack of growth around."

"To help make farming in New York more profitable, we must continue to be vigilant in finding new ways to pare down farm expenses," Lincoln added, "like lowering capital gains tax rates, increasing the exemption of estate taxes until repeal is possible, further reducing regulations, positioning farmers to take advantage of energy deregulation, and broadening this year's historic property tax relief to encompass more farmers."

Lincoln went on to mention that this year's convention marks the 85th anniversary of the founding of the Farm Bureau. The convention was held December 2-5.

Dairylea Cooperative Supports Proposal To Alleviate Declining Milk Prices

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Inc. is urging U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman to initiate an emergency Federal Milk Marketing Order hearing to consider a proposal that would alleviate declining blend prices to dairy farmers.

"We are asking Secretary Glickman to consider adopting a floor under Class I and II prices," said Dairylea President Clyde E. Rutherford. "This change is needed to soften the declines in farm milk prices and bring more stability to the nation's dairy farmers."

Under the proposal, which is also being advanced by other dairy cooperatives throughout the country, a part of the price formula used in calculating Class I prices would be floored at $13.50. Known as the Basic Formula Price (BFP), this price is added to a Class I differential to determine each Order's Class I price. For each of the 32 Federal orders, the BFP is the same, but the Class I differential varies. The Class I differential under the New York-New Jersey Order is $2.42 per hundredweight at the 201-210 mileage zone, the common pricing zone. This means that, if adopted, the Class I price in the New York-New Jersey Order would be $15.92 or higher at the common pricing zone. Additionally, the Class II price would be affected in the same manner.

Since mid-September, barrel cheddar cheese prices traded on the National Cheese Exchange in Green Bay, Wisc. have fallen $.051 per pound, and 40-pound block cheese prices declined $0.395 per pound. Butter prices on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange fell $0.81 per pound, also. A combination of factors including manufacturers' and retailers' inventory management practices and sluggish consumer demand have led to the historic price declines. These price declines translate into substantial farm milk price decreases.

"Adopting this proposal would stem the anticipated decline in average blend prices by more than 30 percent," said Rutherford. "In addition to providing dairy farmers with much-needed price relief, this measure would help to stabilize volatile milk prices by decoupling Class I and II prices from the dramatic changes in the cheese market that can be affected by a few manufacturers."

Dairylea is joining other dairy cooperatives in asking the Secretary to take several additioanl measures. These initiatives include:

- Increasing Dairy Export Incentive (DEIP) sales;
- Activating the DEIP coalition;
- Increasing purchases of cheese for the school lunch program;
- Buying cheese throughout the Food for Progress Program;
- Creating a Cheese Marketing Agency; and
- Focusing promotional advertising on cheese.

Dairylea is a Syracuse-based, agricultural service organization, cooperatively owned by dairy farmers throughout the Northeast. It markets more than 4.5 billion pounds of milk annually and participates, and is invested in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

MMI Reports Best Year Ever

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Milk Marketing Inc. had its best year ever, Executive Vice President and CEO Don Schriver reported at MMI's annual delegate meeting held in Pittsburgh, Nov. 25-26.

Revenues were $1.15 billion for fiscal '96, leaping $100 million from 1995's record, he said. Net savings or earnings were $7.27 million, topping the $5.66 million record from the previous year.

Schriver also said MMI, the third largest dairy cooperative in the U.S., was continuing its move into "value-added products" to provide new outlets for milk and enhance member income.

One of those value-added products is Moo Kooler flavored milk, unveiled at last year's annual meeting as a fun beverage in a round plastic bottle aimed at young consumers.

This year the 2 millionth Moo Kooler rolled off the processing line at MMI's New Bremen, Ohio plant on Nov. 25 and was delivered to Schriver in time to kick off the annual banquet with a Moo Kooler toast.

MMI helped develop and now manufactures Moo Kooler under license from the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mideast, which is test marketing the 2 percent flavored milk beverage in Columbus, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

"Research in the three markets where Moo Kooler was introduced shows that the beverage's arrival has definitely impacted flavored milk sales in a positive way," Schriver said.

"For the first time ever, a product we manufactured earned the highly regarded 'New Product Innovator' award sponsored by Refrigerated and Frozen Foods Magazine," he added. "Only three awards, nationwide, are given."

Moo Kooler is one example of MMI's strategy "to grow business capabilities that put members in a long-term position of security and strength, and provide customers with greater value," Schriver said.

Another example is a new project he announced — a demineralized whey product MMI will produce for DMV USA, a subsidiary of Campina Melkunie, one of the largest dairy cooperatives in the European Community.

MMI "renewed its strategic business alliance with DMV USA," he noted. "Individual product agreements are now part of the strategic alliance." He said 1996 sales in products for DMV, including nonfat dry milk, skim condensed and other bulk products, "amounted to $45 million."

Schriver said MMI's vision is to "develop and pursue income-generating and value-added arrangements that, long-term, increase returns for MMI's member farmers."

That vision, he said, means "moving from our heritage of being a marketing cooperative with commodities to an operating cooperative creating and selling value-added products."

Bringing that vision to reality, he noted, "will take speed, flexibility, agility, risk and courage."

That means, he said, that MMI, with 9,000 members and affiliates in 11 states, will "need to invest more dollars to be able to grow the way we want in value-added markets."

Farmers need to recognize the opportunities in the changing and increasingly global marketplace, Schriver said. "If we don't do it," he added, "someone else will."

Headquartered in Strongsville, Ohio, MMI has regional offices in Cincinnati and Strongsville, Ohio and in Syracuse, N.Y., and manufacturing operations in New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio. MMI is owned by farm families in Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, New York, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Vermont and Delaware.

The Maryland Holstein Association

Anita M Hill, Secretary-Treasurer

1997 STATE CONVENTION

Holstein breeders on the Eastern Shore are working together to host the 1997 convention set for March 14 & 15, 1997. Ken Holland, Pocomoke City, and Frank Walbert, Centreville, are serving as co-chairmen of this event. In an effort to be accommodating to Western Shore breeders, the convention will be held just over the Bay Bridge at Queenstown. Both the day meeting and the banquet will be held on March 14 at the American Legion building. Prices for meals are expected to be $10.00 for lunch and $15.00 for the banquet. A good ladies program is being planned and is expected to cost $12.00 per person.

The Convention Sale will be March 15. Cattle will be housed and sold at the Queen Anne's 4-H Park near Centreville. Dan Hollingsworth III is working with state sale chairman, David Lease, and their committees to plan this event. MD-Hillbrook Sales (Chris & Budgee Hill) has agreed to manage the sale. Cattle selections will be made in the near future. Local sale committee selectors will be looking for consignments around the state, or you can fax a pedigree to Chris Hill at 301-829-2145. MD-Hillbrook Sales can be reached by phoning 301-829-9451.

Complete convention information, with registration forms, will be included in the January newsletter.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

State publicity chairperson, Ann Schenning, said the Southeastern Holstein News is going to start printing the popular "breeder's news" articles again. This article in each issue will feature births, deaths, weddings, outstanding achievements, special farm news etc. If you know anything that can be shared with the Holstein fraternity, contact Ann at 410-836-2283 or Loretta Wright at 410-857-1504. Deadlines for 1997 will be January 1, April 1, June 1, and September 1.

This is the first newsletter since longtime MD Southeastern News editor, Judy Iager, retired. A big THANK YOU to Judy for her years of service and devotion to the Maryland breeders.

WORLD WIDE WEB

When Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone in 1876, it did not ring off the hook with calls from potential backers. After making a demonstration call, President Rutherford Hayes said, "That's an amazing invention, but who would ever want to use one of them?" Maybe this is how some of us feel about the computer and the internet capabilities. Just as the phone became impossible to live without; the computer is increasingly utilized in today's business world, with most progressive companies now advertising an internet address.

Maryland Holstein is working with DHI-Provo to experiment with the World Wide Web. DHI-Provo will be listing information about all the animals consigned to the 1997 Maryland Convention Sale on their BreederNet web site at no cost to the association. The cream page included with this newsletter tells about BreederNet.

1997 ANNUAL BOOKLET

It is time to think about advertising your farm in the 1997 Annual booklet. Susan Kelly Menendez has agreed to edit the book again. Last year's booklet was well distributed, with all Maryland Holstein members getting a copy. Two hundred and fifty copies were distributed at the national Holstein convention, and almost that many were sent to the World Dairy Expo and distributed there.

Your ad should tell a little about your farm, your herd, a special cow family, or just one special cow. We do not want sale ads or anything that might date the ad. Complete information will be sent to you in December. If you would like help in composing an ad, please contact Susan at 410-751-7356.

THIS & THAT

- Harford County breeders are saddened as a tragic farm accident claimed the life of Holstein member, Jimmie D. Miller, November 11th. Mr. Miller is survived by his wife, Geraldine, and five children.

- Robert Knutsen, Rising Sun, has been named as a dairy industry representative to the Maryland Beef Council. This Council is responsible for allocating your beef check-off funds.

- Sire Power is again printing our All-MD Calendar and yours should arrive soon.

- The Milk Promotion committee is working to have MILK named as the official state beverage.

- If you are not currently donating a trophy for a state Holstein award, and would like to, contact Anita Hill, or indicate so on your membership form.

NATIONAL HERDBOOK

At the national convention in Fort Worth, Texas last summer, the national board was directed by the convention delegates to evaluate the current herdbook definitions and identification programs for fulfilling members' needs and assuring the genetic leadership of the breed. It was the feeling of the delegates that a change may need to be made to keep the USA herdbook leadership in the world market.

The national board has developed a proposal that will be presented at state, district, and local meetings this winter. Basically, the proposal is that any Holstein-like animal can be entered in the national herdbook and each paper issued will carry the percent of Registered Holstein Ancestry (RHA) in that animal. Animals with unbroken lineage, as the registered Holstein is now, would be 100%. Classification eligibility is also a part of this proposal. For national shows, animals with 87 percent RHA or higher will be considered eligible.

Any herdbook changes will need a by-law amendment at a national convention to be implemented. Please attend your annual county meeting and state Holstein convention for more details or direct your questions to national director, Marlin Hoff.

Stuffy Buildings Dangerous To Animals

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Farmers would be wise not to get overeager about sealing up their livestock buildings when the brisk winds of the cold weather season sweep across their farm, said Ohio State University agricultural engineers.

Extension Associate Terry M. Mescher said buildings need to be well ventilated to keep animals healthy during the winter. In buildings that are too tight, a moist, humid environment develops that's ripe for pathogens that can harm animals, he said.

"A livestock building should still be more like a barn than a house in that it's designed around the health of the animals that must live there," said Richard R. Stowell, Ohio State livestock facilities specialist.

Most animals can withstand cooler temperatures that feel uncomfortable to a human being, Mescher said. The comfort range for beef or dairy cows is as low as 20 F, he said. Swine and sheep comfort ranges are between 40 F to 60 F, while poultry are comfortable between 45 to 70 F.

Some farmrs err by closing doors completely or plugging ventilation inlets and outlets when a building interior seems too cold. However, a farmer would be better off turning up the heat and maintaining air flow than to incur herd losses from diseases, he said.

"Money on heating is well spent when you start to look at the effect on animals' health and performance," Mescher said.

Mescher said the warning signs of a too-tight building include condensation in the form of fog or rain in the interior or frost on the walls; cobweb formation; excessive air dust or high odors.

"If you walk into a building and smell a strong ammonia odor and see large water droplets, that's a definate sign you're not getting enough air through there," Mescher said.

Stowell added that animals' coughing is another sure indicator of a ventilation problem. Farmers need to pay extra attention to animal distress sounds, which might not always be distinguishable from other sounds in the working environment, he said.

Low levels of pathogens can multiply and threaten animals when a building interior is too moist or humid, said veterinarian Gary Bowman, Ohio State preventive medicine specialist. Nursery pigs can be very vulnerable because young animals don't develop their immune systems until weeks after birth, he said.

Poor ventilation also presents air quality problems that can stress animals, Bowman said. Carbon monoxide, ammonia and dust make for tough breathing that can affect animal health and production, he said.

To get buildings ready for winter, farmers should clean up heating and ventilation controls to make sure equipment is working properly. They should check heating systems for any natural gas leaks and clean dust out of ventilation fans. They should make sure air inlet springs or lever arms are not rusted and are in working condition. In addition, vent louvers and guards should not be obstructed.

For safety's sake, farmers should also keep ice from forming on walkways and high-traffic lanes. Buildings need good drainage for both animals and humans, and drainage ways should be kept clear.

Stowell said that experience shows that animals' greatest needs in a livestock building during winter is usually improved air. Farmers who aren't sure about their buildings' air exchange rates should contact their veterinarian or county Extension agent for help, Stowell said.

"Most veterinarians or county agents will know what to do," Stowell said. "It's hard to see air movement and harder to see lack of air movement, so get their help."

Cattlemen Honor Stewards

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — ErReR Hill Farm in Somerset County , owned by Sidney and Alberta Riggs, was awarded the 1996 Keystone Environmental Stewardship Award by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association at the recent annual Cattlemen's convention.

ErReR Hill Farm consists of 1,300 owned and 600 rented acres, primarily utilized by an Angus and a commercial beef-cow operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Riggs have developed the farm over the years from a start as a small family dairy farm to an integrated beef cattle operation.

ErReR Hill Farm is "home" to over 300 head of purebred Angus and 200 head of commercial cattle, with some calves fed to finished weights on a high-corn silage and wilted grass silage diet, in addition to a moderate amount of homegrown grains.

Most of the finished cattle are sold as sides, quarters, and special packages direct to consumers in the area of the farm. The farm has recently added ostrich and llama enterprises for further diversification.

The Environmental Stewardship Award was established by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association in 1992, and ErReR Hill Farm was nominated for the national award in 1994 and 1995.

The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association initiated the Keystone Environmental Stewardship Award to emphasize the harmony that exists between beef cattle production and the many different environmental considerations that are an important part of our society.

ErReR Hill Farm has been a leader in the use of rotational grazing, spring development, land reclamation, maintaining or enhancing water quality, and many other components of an environment where both farmers and all segments of the general public can coexist.

According to Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, Penn State professor of animal science and secretary of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, "Farmers and ranchers take their responsibilities as custodians of the rural lands of the nation very seriously. The environmental stewardship citations of producers who do an exceptional job of caring for and improving their herds and farms is a credit to everyone involved with agriculture."

For more information, contact the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association at 814-692-4208 or Penn State University's Department of Dairy and Animal Science at 814-863-3659.

INVEST IN YOURSELF.....

through the Milk Urea Nitrogen TEST at PA DHIA

Economics of MUN Testing

- Protein is a costly ingredient in dairy rations.
- Some farms overfeed protein by 10-20%.
- Overfeeding protein by 20% would cost producers about $50/cow/year
  100 cows = $5000/year
- Cost of MUN testing is 15¢/cow/month for members
- MUN testing can signal excess protein feeding or energy imbalance. If correct adjustments are made it could significantly improve the efficiency of milk production and conception rate.

A New Holland 35 Series tractor can really fool you. It looks so compact and stylish, you're totally unprepared for how hard it works.

Powerful engines

Rugged, compact New Holland engines work big, producing 56 to 86 PTO horsepower, and between 22% and 30% torque rise. There is 1000 useful rpm between maximum torque and maximum power. Not only that, they're quiet. And miserly with fuel.

Three transmissions

Choose from three transmissions:

- reliable 12x4 synchro
- 12x12 Synchro Command™ with shuttle

Life As The First Lady Of Agriculture

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Life changed for Jane Brosius when she became Pennsylvania's first lady of agriculture.

After living for 40 years on a small country road, the couple moved to Harrisburg when husband Charles assumed his duties as Pa. Sec. of Agriculture.

Instead of the distant purr of a tractor, the scream of ambulances and fire engines compete with train whistles whizzing past their seventh floor apartment complex.

"But city living isn't all bad," Mrs. Brosius said. "I have yet to see a deer tick there."

Being a government official did not prevent thieves from stealing the Sec. of Agriculture's car, but it did teach Mrs. Brosius neither to venture out after dark nor to carry a purse.

The adjustment from country to city life was actually easier for her than her husband because she grew up in Altoona, Mrs. Brosius said.

She had met her husband-to-be when both participated in the student Penn State Dairy Exposition. Charles was show chairman and she helped a friend by showing a Guernsey cow.

Although she participated in the dairy exposition, her agricultural background was nil. Charles's home farm was the first farm she ever visited.

After Mrs. Brosius graduated with a degree in home economics, she moved to Louisville, Ky., where she helped design kitchens for a company. A few months later, she returned to Pennsylvania and married Charles.

Mrs. Brosius recalled that she made a big mistake as a young bride who was eager to please her husband.

"I offered to help in the barn," she told fellow farm wives who snickered with understanding. "You know what happens after that."

After that, it was her duty to feed the calves and help milk the cows. She learned to thaw the cows' water bowls while the three sons the couple eventually had played in the barn.

Later, the Brosius family sold their Guernsey herd to concentrate on mushroom raising. To give the audience some idea of the scope of their mushroom operation, Mrs. Brosius said that five nights weekly, a tractor and trailer truckload of mushrooms are hauled from the farm to out-of-state cities.

The two million packages of mushrooms sold annually are hand-picked by 20 employees.

Every Friday, Mrs. Brosius drives from Harrisburg to the home farm where she pays the farm bills and calculates the mushroom business' financial records.

For the first time in her husband's life, according to Mrs. Brosius, he needs to report to a boss. No longer does he have the opportunity to make his own decisions and live with the consequences.

She was appalled to discover that his secretary opens his mail and makes the decisions on who he will see and not see each day.

"Not even I had ever opened his mail before," Mrs. Brosius said.

One part of her husband's responsibilities that Mrs. Brosius thoroughly enjoys is the requirement to attend as many of the state's 113 fairs as possible.

"Farm people are special. They're genuine, intelligent, and friendly," said Mrs. Brosius.

Her husband, she said, is determined to see that people in agriculture gain the respect they deserve.

Another benefit of attending county fairs is the opportunity to enjoy the beautiful countryside. Unfortunately, according to Mrs. Brosius, she is not allowed to drive the state car no matter how tired her husband becomes during the trips.

"As taxpayers, you will be pleased to know that I pay all my expenses whenever I travel with my husband," Mrs. Brosius said of her food, lodging, and travel accommodations.

She is thrilled whenever an invitation to dine at the governor's mansion is proffered and pleased that the governor's wife, Mrs. Ridge, is a lover of mushrooms, which are always included on the menu.

Mrs. Brosius volunteers one day a week in the state Grange office and another day in the records department at the Harrisburg Hospital.

One thing that has not changed since their move into the political arena is that their family continues to eat mushrooms on everything. The family's favorite recipe is Creamed Mushrooms.

"Creamed mushrooms can be eaten on everything such as green beans, turkey, filling, mashed potatoes, chicken . . . ," Mrs. Brosius said.

Here is her recipe for your dining pleasure.

CREAMED MUSHROOMS

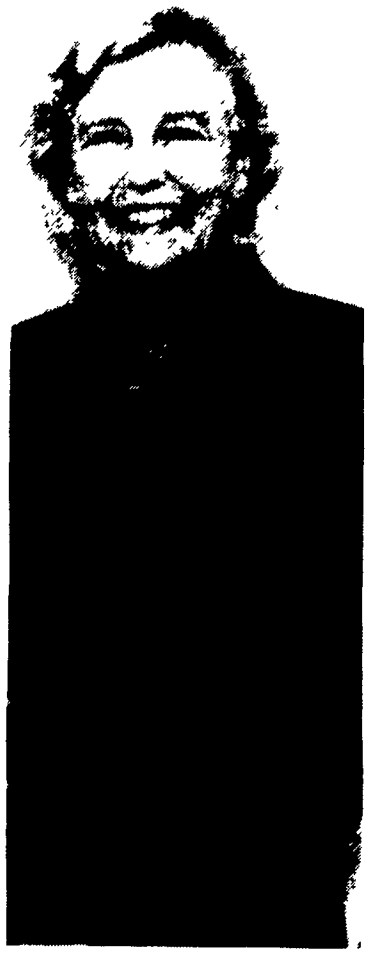
10 ounces button mushrooms, washed and sliced
¼ stick butter

Mushrooms are easily washed by placing them in a plastic bag filled with water and shake. Drain. Melt butter in skillet. Saute sliced mushrooms on medium high. When they start to make their own juice, cook 5 minutes more. Add:

1 can evaporated milk

White sauce made from combining about 3 tablespoons flour with equal amount of cold water.

Stir flour mixture into mushrooms to keep from becoming lumpy. Add salt and pepper to taste, and a dash of nutmeg.



During the annual ADC meeting, Jane Brosius, farm partner and wife of Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius, talks about the change in lifestyle that she and her husband have experienced since his appointment to public office.

Home Is Reflection Of You

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Tired of the bland look of your home's exterior and interior? No money to replace worn upholstery or outdated draperies?

Take courage. Mother and daughter team Dorothy Stambaugh and Kim Jureckson shared lots of ideas for home decorating on a budget during the recent Atlantic Dairy Cooperative women's session.

If you weren't there, you missed the slide show that revealed how Dorothy of Carlisle and her daughter Kim, a dance instructor and choreographer in Lancaster, give their homes a new look by using things they already have.

With a bit of imagination and experimentation, you, too, can give your home a welcoming change.

Start with the entrance. "It's the first thing visitors see. It sets the stage for what's inside," Dorothy said of the importance of creating a welcoming entry.

Fill crocks and baskets with apples, pinecones, flowers, or dried weeds to reflect the season and set at the doorway. Old wreaths can be updated by removing decorations or adding to them with greens, dried materials, twine, or raffia. Sling a pair of ice skates over a sled. Place a chair with a basket on it. Use the space above the doorway to place a swag.

"No matter how small your foyer is inside, don't overlook that area," Dorothy said. Place flowers or mirrors to create a warm welcome.

"Furniture placement is the easiest way to change your home and you haven't spent a dime," Kim said. "Select the room's focal point such as a window or fireplace. If your room doesn't have a focal point, make one by combining items such as framed photos and a clock on a small table."

Arrange the furniture with the focal point in mind. Furniture should be arranged in groupings with a conversation area or a reading area.

Dorothy said that she changes her mantel seasonally but rarely buys anything for it. "Just artfully arrange it," she said of grouping together simple things such as old pictures, glasses, books, candles, or your husband's gun above the fireplace.

If more height is needed for a lamp, place it atop a pile of books.

"A new lampshade can give a lamp a whole new look and become a focal point for the room," said Kim, who loves flowered and printed fabric lampshades.

A fresh coat of paint and a wall paper border is a fairly economical way to brighten a room.

"Off-white is safe but boring," said Kim, who is inclined to use bright colors toned down with printed borders. She showed how she painted the ceiling a bold color then added a border design in her foyer. Although it is a small area, she believes this technique actually makes the area appear larger because it draws the eye upward.

Sponge painting is another option for covering walls economically. This is done by dipping a sponge in one or two contrasting colors and dabbing the walls.

"Mix fabric patterns. They don't always need to match. Use what you have and put it together," she said of the surprisingly results that become evident only after the unusual is tried.

If a table is too tall for an end or coffee table, cut the legs shorter.

For unusual window treatments, try hanging an old quilt, blanket or coverlet for a shower curtain. Add tabs or casing to slip through a rod. Tie back with ribbon and fasten with a large jewelry pin.

Use an old lace tablecloth and cut in a triangle as a window topper.

Because Kim doesn't sew at all and her mother is an accomplished seamstress, the pair showed examples of window treaments that can be sewn or with fabric simply draped and puddled on the floor.

If wall space is at a premium, put a shelf above a window. For added shelving, take two unpainted ladders and place boards across for shelves.

"Don't be afraid to place items at unusual levels," said Kim. She places groupings of pictures low, which can also cover up unsightly electrical sockets.

Use old pieces of tapestry and lace for pillows. Add an assortment of pillows with different fabric texture than the sofa.

Slip covers can extend the life of upholstery that is tattered. A chair looks more inviting if a foot stool or ottoman is placed in front of it.

Don't overlook your bathroom. Dorothy hung a collection of antiques on the wall of her bathroom, added a bench with a variety of items such as an old Sears and Roebuck catalog and other magazines. Guests are known to linger so long in her bathroom because they are intriqued with paging through the catalog.

Home accessories add warmth, color, and texture. Plants add to the atmosphere. Candles placed in glass jars tied with twine or raffia are a quick and easy solution for adding a touch of warmth to a room.

"Your home is a reflection of you. Surround yourself with things you love," Dorothy said.

Milk Bottles And Stories Behind Them Intrigue Collector

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

"Everyone's responsible for dusting their own hobbies!" said Wanda Yoder of Belleville, Mifflin County. Luckily, some of her husband's more than 250 milk bottles are packed away in boxes. The rest sit on shelves in the family den as a tribute to Mifflin County's milk pedding history - and where J. Loren must dust them.

J. Loren Yoder found his first milk bottle on a Sunday afternoon walk as a kid.

"We used to hike to the mountains on Sundays and always brought back something. I forgot about the milk bottle for a while. Then I started buying them," Loren reflects. The first one I found was a local Meadowbrook Dairy bottle with N. R. Peachey (Nelda Peachey) on it. I have a Meadowbrook bottle with G.J. Peachey on it too."

J. Loren's favorite bottles are from the Ka-Vee Dairy in Belleville. Both the bottles and creamers say "Best By Test." Loren's Ka-Vee gallon buttermilk bottle has "Years to your Health" printed on it and the instructions to deposit 15 cents and phone 54.

Wanda cherishes the milk bottles her father once filled, capped and delivered. Wanda's father, Lester Zook, began delivering milk in the late '20s for his dad. His Cloverleaf Dairy milk sold for 9 cents a quart and 5 cents a pint. Wanda treasures her square Cloverleaf bottles, but would like to have an older bottle.

"The first milk bottles made were embossed," expalins Loren. "Then came the round bottles with painted letters and pictures. Then the painted square bottles."

In addition to Meadowbrook, Cloverlead, and Ka-Vee, Loren has bottles from many other local dairies - Big Valley Farm Dairy (John Y. Hostetler), Civitts Dairy, Hartzler Dairy (Joe Hartzler), and Kanagy Dairy, whose bottles say "Use Kanagy's Superior Guernsey Milk ... and be convinced of its quality."

Loren would love to have an Old Blue Shadow milk bottle from a dairy owned by Thomas and J.E. Sharp.

Some of teh most valuable milk bottles have Walt Disney characters painted on them. On one bottle, Pinocchio says, "Dear Kids, If you are looking high and low for something that will make you grow, a quart of milk each day you'll find is just the thing, sincereley signed, Pinocchio!"

Also valuable are Dairylea's milk bottles with Hop Along Cas-

Homestead Notes

Dawn stalked the eastern horizon, reluctant to come fully awake on this cold, crisp December morning.

Silhouettes of trees kept vigil in the shadowy early morning. High up in the branches of one just overhead, an early bird began twittering, perhaps in search of the worm that feathered early-risers are supposed to get.

Annually on this morning, an estimated million stalkers have fled their routine to haunt hardwood stands and fencerows abutting valley fields. Like warriors old, they come bearing arms, ready to engage in guerilla warfare with a worthy opponent.

Cagey and wise from their natural instincts, the quarry sneaks away over mountain ridges and through ravines, bounds across open hillside clearcuts, or cleverly maneuvers onto lands ringed in "no hunting" signs.

There are no "no hunting" signs where I wait, poised for the ambush. My weapon is in position ... waiting ... waiting ... for the trophy to show itself.

And there it is! Bam! A successful shot.

But, while the ramrodders took to the woods this week to thin the whitetail population that continues to thrive in our wildlife-wealthy state, I embarked on a hunting expedition of a different sort.

Same aim - to kill the quarry. Same aim - to keep a population under control. And my particular aim is not just to down those ordinary individuals of the species, but the giant, trophy sorts.

The first was spotted in the bathroom, some days ago. Then a second. When it got so that you couldn't brush your teeth without these giant "horse" flies buzzing your head, I put out the call to arms. And dug the plastic flyswatter out of the closet, where the oncoming of cool weather had relegated it some weeks before.

Where do they come from, these super-humongous, mutant-sized versions of the ordinary housefly? Do they triple in size while in fall hibernation in the house? Is there something about interior warmth that causes them to swell up several times their original body weight? Flies are a major summertime irritant at the barn. To have to do battle with them in December, when the cool weather sends them hunting warmth - our warmth - calls for a declaration of insect war.

Tell me, how can something that flies and moves so slowly through the air, around your head, past your face, suddenly turn into a NASCAR speed winner when you raise your flyswatter and take aim? Huh? Can someone explain that to me?

And, why, when there will be a half-dozen of these oversized, kamikaze bugs buzzing your head while you read the paper at the kitchen table, does every single one disappear the instant you slowly and cautiously ease your little fingers around the handle of the flyswatter?

After a couple of such rounds - losing rounds to the flies - I'm on my feet and stalking the little flying buggers with the determination of a first-time deer huner. And they've all disappeared, over the ridges and into the ravines of the kitchen, hiding behind the houseplants and hunkering down up under the cupboards.

Eventually, after we grow weary of the annual pre-winter, giant-fly invasion of the house, The Farmer will pull out the big guns. Before retiring for bed, he'll open fire with a can of pyrethrin spray. A truce will have been signed by morning. Except for a few of the most clever of the flies, which will have immediately fled to the cracks around the windows of our old farmhouse and gulped snippets of air seeping in from the outside until the aerial raid diminishes.

And will hang around to repopulate their kinds for next year's battle.

Maybe it's time to stop purposely hunting down a natural enemy of flies.

Long live the cobwebs.

Milk Bottles And Stories

sidy saying milk is "Hoppy's favorite!" Loren has some Dairylea babyface cream top bottles too. The cream collects at the buttle-like top, ready to be spooned out. He has a tiny Royale Dairy (Lewistown) cream spoon too!

Although Loren enjoys collecting local milk bottles the most, he collects others for trading. He subscribes to "The Milk Route," a newsletter from the New England states that lists shows and advertises bottles for sale. Loren frequents antique sales, household sales, flea markets, yards sales, and goes "junkin" every once in a while. In many cases, the price of the bottle depends on how bad the person wants it!

The rest of the time he surfs the internet (Holsteins@Prodigy.com), seeing if someone out there wants a bottle he just may have. He sees it as delivering the message of milk the modern way! It's also a great way to preserver history - if you don't mind dusting them!

Mifflin County dairy farmer J. Loren Yoder is interested in only mint condition milk bottles.

Featured Recipe

Cookbooks are written for different reasons. A recently released cookbook has been written as a legacy to author Molly Ann Mohlar's mother.

Her mother, Eleanor Silsby Mohlar, was known as "The Apple Lady," by many customers who purchased apples from Orangeport Orchards near Buffalo, N.Y. Over the years The Apple Lady collected many wonderful apple recipes and wrote poetry.

The cookbook is a homespun collection of 100 apple recipes, some inspirational poetry, and a glimpse into the life of a hardworking farmwife, mother of five children, and "a woman who trusted God to lead her through adversity, and always remembered to thank Him when He helped her."

A portion of the proceeds will go to the American Cancer Society.

For a copy of the cookbook, send $4.69 plus $2 for shipping and handling to M. Mohlar, 2930 Cowley Way #308, Sand Diego, CA 92117.

Here is a recipe from the cookbook.

1 cup sugar
½ cup butter

Company Is Coming!

After the eighth trip carrying valuable "stuff" up the attic stairs, I remembered Russell's words, "It was your idea."

Yes, I'll admit, I readily agreed to host my sister and her two children overnight last weekend as we all prepared for a family reunion event. Tell me, why is it so easy to collect so much extra stuff in a spare room? I introduced my vacuum nozzle to a few places it hadn't seen for quite some time. All this work to impress upon my sister that I really am a good housekeeper! Are you convinced yet?

Why is it when company comes, you try to show an image of a perfect family and a perfectly clean house? With the holidays just around the corner, I am sure many of you are thinking about all the cleaning that needs to be done around the house.

Reality is that we do need to maintain a sanitary and safe home environment but we don't have to spend every waking hour cleaning. Personally I enjoy reading those quick tip books on how to clean faster and with less effort. They seem to motivate me for short periods of time. We all know the basics, it's just that we need a little motivation every now and then to remind us of what we already know. Here are some hassle-free cleaning tips for busy people provided by the Consumer Service Center of Johnson Wax for this dose of motivation.

The Now Principle

• Clean as you go! Not because you "should," but because it's the painless way to keep things clean and orderly. This means ...

• Hang up your coat as soon as you get in the door.

• Rinse dishes after you eat! Then stash them in the dishwasher or stack them for handwashing later. (If you can make yourself wash them right away - fine! If not, you're still one step closer to clean.)

• Wipe the bathroom sink quickly after each use. (Mom was right. It's easier than facing a sea of soap scum at the end of the week).

• Try the "lick and a promise" technique. (Translation: It's better to take a quick swipe with the dust cloth than no swipe at all).

• Make your bed before you leave the house in the morning - or don't make it at all!

A Now Hint: With practice, you can perfect the technique of making the bed while you're still in it! Next time the snooze alarm gives its last blast, try this: stretch out in the middle of the bed. Pull and straighen the covers up over you. Then billow them easing yourself out as they fall. Now all that's left to do is straigthen the top.

The Preventative Principle

Goodness knows you've got enough to do without making work. So train yourself to prevent it with measures such as:

• Keeping a supply of disposable cups and plates on hand in case a crowd drops by.

• Using throw rugs or utility mats in heavy traffic areas and entrances to catch dirt before it spreads.

• Putting wastebaskets with disposable liners in every room and using them!

• Having coasters on coffee and end tables and asking your friends to use them.

• Storing small amounts of leftovers in disposable cups or plastic bags for less washing.

• Placing a piece of alumium foil under casseroles that you know will spill over the minute your back is turned.

A Preventative Hint: The best time to clean the bathtub is while you're still in it! Just take the washcloth and give the tub a quick once-over. If you really hate hassle, bathe with a handful of bubble bath or water conditioner in the tub. This will keep the ring from forming and it smells good too! Attention show people: towel dry yourself and then the shower! This prevents water spots and soapy build up on shower walls and chrome.

The Mood Principle

If your frame of mind is just right, you'll work quickly, easily and more efficiently. So go with your moods - not against them! Contrary to what your parents or roommates might have advised you, you should ... • resist feeling guilty if you wake up Saturday morning and can't get motivated to clean. Go ahead and play tennis! Maybe you'll feel more like cleaning when you get home. • Take advantage of "odd hours" moods. If the energy of Fred and Ginger make you want to clean your closet during the Very Late Movie, who's to say you can't?

• Get inspiration where you can. If the latest tune gets you revved up and ready to clean, by all means blast it! If you only clean when company's coming, plan a regular get together for several friends on Friday. (It's guaranteed to get you going on Thursday night and then the weekend is yours without worry).

A Mood Hint: Fool yourself! Tell the inner part of you that doesn't want to clean that all you're going to do is empty the trash. Then when you're done go on to another small job and then another. The trick is that it's easy ... once you get started.

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

The holiday season is upon us once more. Festive meals with friends and family become the focus of food. In addition to making the many holiday desserts that are so much part of holiday cheer, you can help family and friends meet the 5 a Day challenge without missing out on all those traditional dishes.

The 5 a Day challenge is an encouragement by the Pennsylvania 5 a Day Coalition to remind individuals to eat 5 or more servings of fruits and vegetables each day.

Fruit can be a part of the holiday tradition. Fruit juice can be the base of punches served at family gatherings. Since you want everyone to get home safe, a non alcoholic fruit punch would be a way of expressing your concern about having a good and safe time.

Offering a mixture of both traditional baked goods and lower calorie desserts opens up choices to your friends and family. They might really appreciate having a choice or being able to enjoy both. The recipes that follow might fit in your holiday menu plan.

Vegetables can be a focus for the holidays. Sweet potatoes get the spotlight as part of the traditional holiday feast. Offer your guests sweet potatoes baked in the microwave as alternative to canned sweet potatoes. Slit their skin while hot and add a touch of butter. Place them on the table as a choice for the calorie conscious at your meal. Traditionally many cooks make candied sweet potatoes at the holidays which are often high in sugar and fat.

When planning your holiday buffet, remember that plain and simple vegetables can still be a key part of holiday eating. Relish trays loaded with raw broccoli, cauliflower, carrots, peppers, mushrooms and radishes provide color and help those attending meet the 5 a Day challenge. Choose a low fat salad dressing to use with the relish tray - a number of these have great taste at half the calories. Eat and enjoy. Happy holidays!

Holiday Citrus Punch
(an offical 5 a Day recipe from the Pennsylvania 5 a Day Coalition)

Juice of 4 oranges (1¼ cups)
Juice of 1 lemon
1 can (6 oz.) Unsweetened pineapple juice, chilled
Ice cubes
1 can (6 oz.) apple juice, chilled
1 can (12 oz.) low calorie lemon-lime flavored soda, chilled

In pitcher combine fruit juices, soda and ice; stir well. Garnish each serving with orange and lemon carthweel slices, if desired. Make 9 oz. servings. Nutritional information per serving: calories 87; fat 9 g; cholesterol 9 mg; fiber 1 g; sodium 14 mg.

Sherry Ambrosia
(an official 5 a Day recipe from the Pennsylvania 5 a Day Coalition)

⅔ cups orange slices
1 cup fresh grapefruit sections
2 medium red apples
2 tablespoons dry sherry OR sherry extract
1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice
2 teaspoons sugar or sugar substitute or equal 2 teaspoons sugar
⅓ cup sliced banana
2 tablespoons flaked coconut
3 maraschino cherries, drained

Cut orange sections into halves, grapefruit sections into quarters, and cored (but not pared) apples into small bite-sized cubs. Mix these fruits with sherry or sherry extract, lemon juice, and sugar substitute. Cover and chill for 1 hour or longer. Just before serving, add banana; mix well. Spoon into 5 individual dessert dishes and scatter coconut on top of fruit. Slice maraschino cherries; place a few slices on top of coconut.

Nutritional information per serving: calories 82; fat 1 g; cholesterol 0 mg; fiber 2 g; sodium 6 mg.

Telephone Skills Boost Child's Confidence

With four to six-year-olds, parents should encourage the memorization of a child's home phone number. Make this into a game. Show your child your phone number. Ask him to say each number aloud as you point to it.

Then ask the child to copy each number on a separate square of paper. Put the squares in the order of your phone number. Practice saying the numbers. Then test your child by scrambling the slips and asking him/her to order them correctly.

Without looking at the phone, ask your child to write down the phone number. Post this accomplishment for all to see.

Finally, when you and your child are away from home (and some adult is at home) have your child practice dialing the number of your home and speaking with the person who answers.

This simple practice can boost their self-esteem and can also prepare them for emergencies.

Students Design Favorite Book Characters From Pumpkins, Gourds, Squash

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Second graders at the Lititz Area Mennonite School selected their favorite book characters and then dressed a pumpkin or squash to look like their character.

Emily Zimmerman rocked a realistic baby wrapped in a blanket. The neck-faced pumpkin was painted flesh-colored, and turned upside down to have the facial features drawn on it.

Sara Burkholder's favorite character, Dusty mole, wore wire rimmed glasses on his tiny gourd face. Austin Martin's Curious George wore his trademark yellow hat.

Big Red the dog looked just like a hound when Keith Martin added floppy ears and drooping eyes to the painted neck pumpkin.

Students were not allowed to cut the pumpkins, squash or gourds. But they could paint, draw, glue on hair or add clothing to their characters.

Originally and creativity blossomed. Because it was a do-it-at-home project, most students had help from parents or older siblings.

Know Your Apples

Holidays wouldn't be the same without biting into a fresh, crisp Eastern apple or baking a Dutch Apple Crumb pie. Celebrate and treat yourself to the best apples by buying local apples.

Choose an apple variety best suited for your purpose. Some apple varieties such as Red Delicious and Golden Delicious are all-purpose apples. They're eaten raw, baked or used in salads. They are also good for sauces or pies.

Late season apples include winesap, Rome beauty, Granny Smith, spigold, Northern spy, golden delicious, melrose, Idared, Rome and others. These late apples tend to be firmer than many of the early-season varieties like Paula Red or early MacIntosh..

When shopping for your "holiday" apples, choose only ripe fruit for best flavor. For example, most ripened green varieties have a greenish-yellow background color. Apples should be firm, free of bruises, skin breaks and decay spots. Soft apples have a mealy texture.

Many apple varieties for home fruit growing have multiple uses. Other types are best suited for baking or dessert apples. Some are good varieties for eating raw while others are best in sauces and salads. Varieties like Rome beauty, Idared, freedom, sparton or empire are good baking and dessert apples. Good eating apples include MacIntosh, golden red delicious, Ida red, stayman and others.

Researchers at fruit growing labs at Rock Springs and Biglerville have found new apple cultivars that may someday become your favorite eating apples. New cultivar like goldrush, pristine, orin, sansa, suncrisp, skizuka and sunrise are now grown. Only by trying and testing these newer apples can we judge each of these varieties for sweetness versus tartness.

Unrefrigerated, ripened apples will retain their quality for about one week. Unripened apples can be quickly ripened at home by storing them in a partly sealed bag at room temperature.

For longer storage (up to one month) keep ripened apples in the crisper compartment of the refrigerator. Keep them loose or store them in a partly sealed plastic bag to help reduce the odor of apples throughout the refrigerator.

Use your local apples in a special way. Why not try them in muffins, cakes, salads and pancakes. Peeled and cored apples quickly turn brown. To prevent this, soak apples 5 minutes in one quart of water with three tablespoons of bottled lemon juice and 2 crushed 500-mg vitamin C tablets. The flavor is not affected and the flesh will retain its color for about 3 hours at room temperature.

Any questions regarding the above article can be addressed to Tom Becker, Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-7408.

Liquid Supplements Not Miracle Food

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — "It looks like a milkshake, but your body will thinks it's rocket fuel." Or "While it may not add years to your life, it may add life to your years." So boasts the ads of two of several liquid supplement products now being marketed in magazines and on television.

Liquid supplements have long been used by hospitals and hospices for patients too sick to meet their nutritional needs with a regular diet. They are especially useful for people on chemotherapy since they're easier to swallow than regular food and provide the concentrated calories needed to maintain weight. But lately, liquid meal replacement products are showing up on grocery shelves as meals-in-a-can for people too harried to sit down to eat.

The advertising seems to be paying off. New products have hit the market and old reliables, like Ensure and Sustacal, have seen sales rise by 60 percent or more. Are these products an example of what dinner will look like in the future, or are they considered a specialty item, best left on the shelf until really needed?

As their labels tout, most liquid supplement meals are a good source of energy - that is, calories. Calories tend to run about 240 per 8 ounces; similar to what you'd find in a milkshake and about twice what you'd find in 2 percent milk. Some, like Resource Plus, are quite high in fat (12 grams per 8 ounces); others provide no more fat than you'd find in 2 percent milk.

Most add an array of vitamins and minerals to their products. You can usually get the same effect for less money, though, by popping a vitamin-mineral pill and washing it down with a milkshake.

This doesn't mean there is anything wrong with occasionally grabbing a can of Sustacal or Ensure for breakfast on the way out the door or mixing a packet of instant breakfast drink with a tall glass of milk for breakfast or a late night supper. It's better than grabbing a cookie and a soft drink and definitely better than no breakfast at all. However, unless your liquid supplement comes with extra fiber, you'll be missing out on the fiber you would have gotten if you'd chosen a high-fiber cereal and fruit.

Also, you'll have to put up with the taste, not always described in the most pleasant terms. For me, grabbing a bagel, muffin, fruit, or juice sounds much more appealing.

State Wool Contest Winners Proceed To National Judging

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — Their separate creations from the versatile fabric of wool were striking as the senior winner Lee Brandt from Lebanon County and junior winner Christina Zylka from Fayette County , stood side by side at the state Make It Yourself With Wool competition.

In January each of them will compete at the national contest held in Nashville, Tenn.

Tall, debonair and handsome in the black tuxedo he had created for his senior prom, with white shirt, vest, and bow tie, Brandt was a perfect foil for the bonny lass from Mt. Pleasant, clad in a creamy outfit designed for the Irish countryside.

Zylka had knitted an Irish-Aran sweater with 100 percent wool, then hand dyed it a hue of peach mist to wear over a classical imported Irish linen, banded dress shirt. She tucked it into a back-slitted, fully-lined, straight skirt of comfortable 100 percent wool that she had adapted from a pattern by Calvin Klein.

Irish from tip to toe was 100 percent achieved with the riding boots and felted hat that she styled with ribbon and lace.

At last year's national Make It Yourself With Wool, in the mohair category, the 16-year-old had placed sixth.

At 4-H State Days, Zylka, the daughter of Edwin and Susan Zylka, took first place at Fashion Revue. In December she will compete at Nationals in Memphis, Tenn.

Tailoring his own clothes now is out of the question for 19-year-old Brandt who commutes to classes at the Harrisburg Community College, from his home. Computer Science is his major and time is premium.

"Right now, I'm going to call sewing to a halt because I'm going to college," said the young man who was celebrating a birthday during the wool proceedings in the Somerset Ramada Inn's Tropical Courtyard on Saturday, Nov. 23.

Ninety percent wool with a satin lapel, the waistcoat features a welt pocket and covered buttons and the pants, front tucks, welt pocket, and satin ribbon down the side of each leg.

Brandt designed 24 tucks into his cotton-polyester shirt that he topped with a brocade vest featuring a satin lapel and covered buttons.

Looking ahead, the son of Larry and Darlene Brandt, sees the sewing skills he's acquired as a readily available asset if he ever faces a cash flow problem.

Pam Marburger of Crawford County took home a new sewing machine after her three-piece, tailored wool suit won in the adult division.

In its entirety, the navy blue, 100 percent wool blazer, skirt and vest ensemble is also lined in navy blue and accessorized by the hair piece and same fabric purse that Marburger designed.

Her husband is Lee Marburger and they have two daughters.

Ten-year-old Amy Wagner, a fifth grader at the Maple Ridge Elementary School in Somerset also won a sewing machine for the vest and shorts she constructed in the preteen division.

Made from 100 percent black watch tartan, the vest is lined with buttons and tie back. The lined shorts have a front zipper and elastic back.

Jeanne McCuean's military style suit of 100 percent wool gabardine, attention-getting red jacket, and black pants made her the senior runner-up.

Trimimed with black braid and gold buttons the suit was smart enough to cause a passerby to stand at attention and touch the brow in salute to its wearer.

A senior at Blackhawk High School, McCuen is from New Galilee in Beaver County.

Junior runner-up, Julie Sechler, on the other hand opted to create a jumper and jacket in a softer design and color.

The solid mint green jumper and pastel plaid jackete that barely skimmed her waist, are of 100 percent wool and fully lined.

She added a strip of mint green wool crepe to the jacket collar, covered the buttons and coordinated a hair accent as well.

The Meyersdale Area High School junior is 16.

Adult runner-up Joan Klein of Beaver County thrives on creativity at the sewing machine.

The active wife of George Klein has competed in Make It With Wool for six years.

This year the Darlington resident did a combined project of leather and wool which she termed "the ultimate challenge," and "best of two worlds," to create a leather swing-line coat and very stylish jumpsuit featuring a blouson top and wide matching belt.

Somehow in the midst of teaching 23 schooled and home schooled students, plus 27 4-H'ers to sew, Klein assists her husband with farming, gardening, and 38 Polled Herefords.

Also participating on Saturday in preteen were Elisa Grieco, Lauren Howell, Rebecca Sleppy, and Breigh Svonavec.

Catch The Spirit Of The Season

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Hundreds of people who thrive on the activity of the Christmas season attended the Berks County Extension holiday program held recently. They were searching for ideas for decorating, cooking, fashion, and gift giving.

They were not disappointed. Creative ideas flowed from the variety of speakers who repeated the day-long seminar two days in a row to accomodate those who registered early.

Holiday Trimmings Indoors and Out

Brian Horn of The Flower Warehouse in Blue Ball displayed many items available at the warehouse for the do-it-yourselfer.

Horn displayed a variety of wreaths, swags, and garlands. These may be purchased plain and decorated by wiring or hot gluing the items on to the background. He said that it's easier to change wreaths from year to year if items are wire. If items are glued, they may be clipped from the pine branches.

To avoid strings from glue gun, Horn said that the temperature should be set on high rather than low heat. Otherwise pull out the strings.

He demonstrated bow making the easy way. The standard bow is made with three yards of ribbon formed into 14 loops. To wire the loops together, use #22 gauge wire; otherwise, the wire will be too hard to twist easily.

Creative Gift Wrappings

This session was taught by the family living advisory committee who call themselves the "bay ladies."

They decorated plain brown bags with holiday trims and cut outs. They also gave instructions on how to make mini tote fabric bags and serged bottle bags in which to place gifts.

If you never heard of quilt jam but give homemade items such as a quilt, afghan, or sweater, consider this. Take a junior-size baby food jar, fill with scraps of fabrics or yarn that you had used to make the gift. Secure the lid. Then take a small piece of fabric or a lace doily to cover the lid by tying a piece of yarn or ribbon around it. Label it with a self stick label as Quilt Jam or Sweater Jam or Afghan Jam, etc. This will serve as a first aid jar for the item should it rip or become damaged.

Other ideas for wrapping presents included sponging designs on paper and using lace, raffia, twine, or jute, which is more economical to tie packages in place of ribbon.

Instead of gift wrapping books, tie with a ribbon and attach an ornament.

Creative Accessorizing

Representatives from Doneckers, an upscale clothing store, demonstrated scarf tying and dressing up outfits with pins, necklaces, and belts.

Rather than buying a new holiday outfit, give one in your closet a whole new look with a scarf. Animal prints are popular this year in scarves, handbags, and belts. Dramatic effects can be had by combining usual colors and items. Take a basic stone-colored suit and drape it with silver jewelry or an animal print scarf.

Stores such as Doneckers will help with selecting accessories if you take the clothing you wish to accessorize to the store. They will also demonstrate unique scarf-tying ideas. For example, if you have a large square scarf, knot both ends together and slip on as a jacket.

Easy, Elegant Holiday Gifts

Ellen Spector Platt of Meadow Lark Flower and Herb Farm demonstrated ways to update wreaths by using items from nature. She wrapped sheet moss with gold wire around a wreath. Then stuck in small gold-gilted frames with old photos to give to those who love heirlooms. Wrap gold wire around a pen or pencil to curl it for a bow.

If you have a broken vase, china cup or other item; instead of discarding it, stuff in some dried flowers which cover up the crack or it simply adds to the old-look that is in vogue.

Another popular look for those who love country is to use cardboard containers such as the round Quaker Oats or corn meal boxes or empty flour bags. Create a flower or herb arrangement within them. Put some small stones in the bottom to weight down the arrangement so that it doesn't tip over. Cut a piece of floral foam to size or use trimmings of left-over foam to fill the container.

Some winning combinations include the following:

- Corn meal box with herbs such as sage, oregano, and mini-corn.
- Quaker Oats box with dried sead oats and red gomphrena.
- Flour bag rolled down with wheat and bright flowers.
- Tea tin with mints, bee balm, and other tea herbs.
- Cocoa container with cinnamon sticks and orange slices.

Dusty grapevine wreaths may be rinsed off to give them a fresh look.

A cute look for those who have mismatched child's mittens is to attach them on a green wreath and hang on the outside door. Stuff the mittens or gloves with tissue paper and attach to the wreath with spool wire that is used to tie the opening of the mitten shut. Make three yarn bows for additional color and wire to the wreath.

If you need a box for gift giving a wreath, spray a cardboard one with gold paint for a glamorous look and tie with a bow.

Fishy Appetizers

For fresh ideas for serving party hors d'oeuvres, Fay Strickler, extension home economist, had plenty of fishy ones.

"Catch the spirit of the 'SEAson' by serving seafood appetizers," she said.

"Some of the simplest appetizers are also the tastiest. And many, such as cold spreads and dips, can be prepared ahead of time. In fact, they're often better when made a day before serving," Strickler said.

Here are some of her ideas. More will be printed during upcoming weeks in the cooking section of this paper.

SHRIMP CHRISTMAS TREE

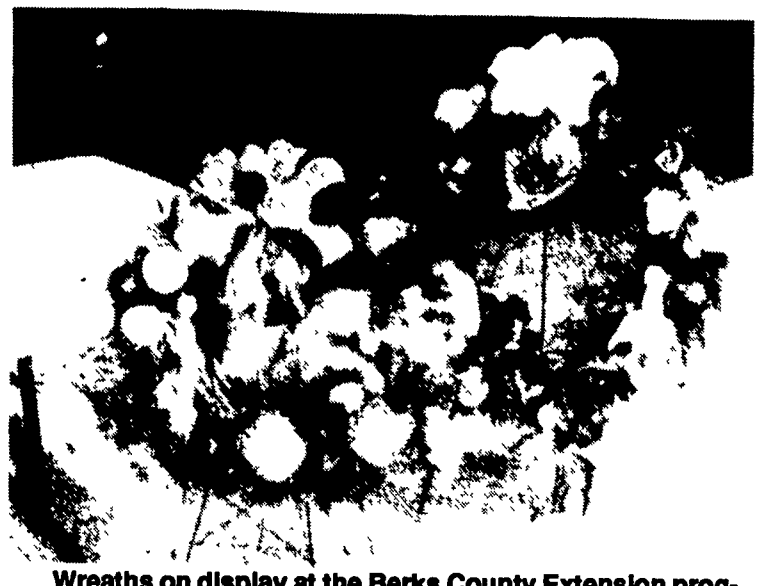
2 pounds medium shrimp
1 bunch curly endive
1 foam cone, 1½ -feet tall
1 small box round toothpicks
Cocktail sauce

Place shrimp in boiling salted or seasoned water. Cover and simmer about five minutes or until shrimp are pink and tender. Drain. Peel shrimp. Devein if desired. Chill.

Separate, wash, and dry endive. Starting at the base of the foam cone and working up, cover the cone with overlapping leaves of endive. Fasten endive to the cone with toothpick halves. Cover fully with greens to resemble a Christmas tree. Attach shrimp to the tree in loose spirals with toothpicks. (See photo). For flair, add a red bow to the top of the tree. The tree

(Turn to Page B16)

A shrimp tree, arranged by Berks County extension home economist Fay Strickler, serves as both centerpiece and as hors d'oeuvres for guests at a holiday buffet.



Wreaths on display at the Berks County Extension program show how last years' wreaths can be dressed up by inserting either new materials or left over ornaments made from silk, parchment, dried, or latex materials.

A participant examines this garland made by Brian Horn of the Flower Warehouse in Blue Ball. The base is an artifical green garland. Flowers, berries, oranges, and bulbs are wire and set off by a wire bow.

Make your own holiday gift bags by using brown bags, gift wrap, bows, paints, and imagination.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Now that I don't have much outside work to do, I've been sorting through some old papers. And, I do mean "old" as they date from 1830 to present.

In one of the boxes that I looked at, I found a small notebook in which my father kept a record of every penny that he spent on his 1918 wedding trip. They traveled by train to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and then Niagara Falls in two weeks.

I found some of the prices very interesting as they were so much lower than today's prices. The hotels cost from $1.50 to $2.50 per night. Their suppers ranged from 50 cents to 60 cents for two people. A haircut was 25 cents and a newspaper was only two cents. The price of movies ranged from 10 cents to 40 cents depending on where they were staying.

After they came home from their two-week trip, he continued to keep a record of his money. A strap for his buggy was 20 cents and the dentist charged a whopping one dollar. A hostler, who took care of his horse when he went to town, charged 10 or 15 cents depending on where he went. And, always there was toll to pay as almost every road had a toll house. These prices ranged from seven cents to fourteen cents and so many people drove miles out of their way in order to avoid a toll.

Where did he get his money? His father paid him $1.50 per week to work on the family farm. He augmented this income by selling honey from his bees - $4.50, helping the neighbors to thresh - $3.00 and trapping and skinning skunks - $5.00.

It certainly was a different time as we can hardly comprehend how much the price of everything has risen.

4-H Youth Development Professional Attends Conference on Educating For Change

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Michael J. Martin, Luzerne County extension 4-H/youth agent, joined more than 1,150 youth development professionals from across the nation here to reflect on and celebrate 50 years of the 4-H/youth development profession and to discover new ways to educate young people for change.

Local 4-H agent Michael Martin received national honors in the communicator awards program. Martin received the National Communicator Award for his periodical publication, the Luzerne County "4-H Focus" newsletter. Martin was also selected regional contact-elect for the national member recognition committee.

The annual professional development conference, held Nov. 5-9, was marked by celebration of 50 years of the National Association of Extension 4-H Youth Agents (NAE4-HA). NAE4-HA was formed to enhance professional skills and competencies of youth development professionals and to strengthen the profession, its image, standards, and support. The conference was hosted by the Michigan Association of Extension 4-H youth staff.

Since 1946, extension 4-H youth agents have been educating young people for change - change from primarily agrarian economies to more industrial economies; change from predominantly rural communities to urban and suburban communities; change prompted by an advancing technological age; change prompted by increasing global awareness and diverse populations; and most important, change in the way young people see themselves, learn about themselves, and prepare themselves for the future.

The 1996 NEA4-HA conference provided seminars, workshops, and poster and research presentations to help participants gain new knowledge in how to educate for change to meet the developmental needs of young people today. The sessions focused on how to use changes in the environment, in technology, in the economy, in the ways youth are empowered, and in the diversity of our population to better prepare young people for successful futures.

The conference also featured keynotes by author and consultant Peter Block and Essence Magazine Editor-In-Chief Susan L. Taylor.

Block focused on helping youth development professionals understand the need for and benefits of having an empowered organization. These tools were seen as critical to an organization such as 4-H that relies on empowered youth and volunteers to effect change in communities.

Taylor has continued to use her writings, television show, and public appearances to encourage the disenfranchised - especially young people - to greater involvement and empowerment in determining life directions. She helped conference attendees look at ways to encourage teens to realize and use their strengths to take charge of their lives.

For more information on the 4-H youth development program, contact Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 825-1701.

Tips For Purchasing Live Tree

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — If you plan on purchasing a balled and burlapped tree, now is the time to prepare the site. The planting area should be well-drained, receive adequate sunlight, and take the final size of your tree into consideration. Dig the hole before the ground freezes; the hole should be the same depth and twice the width of the rootball. The soil should be stored in the garage so it doesn't freeze.

Freshly cut trees can be selected directly in the field. Choosing your own tree will guarantee its freshness and prolong its life. Here are some other tips to keep your tree fresh:

- If stored outside, keep the base in water and the tree away from the wind and sun.
- Saw ¼ inch from the base of the trunk just before bringing it in.
- Secure tree in a stand designed for the size of your tree.
- Immediately pour in warm water and always keep the water above the base.
- Check the water level each day — the tree may take a pint to a gallon each day. Many people have heard about different additives that are meant to prolong the tree's freshness or fireproof it. They really don't add anything that plain water won't. Make sure your tree always has water.
- Before decorating, check the condition of electric lights and connections.
- Turn off lights at night or whenever you leave home.

Don't throw your tree out after the holidays. Limbs can be used to mulch flower beds or chipped and added to the compost pile. The trunk can be cut, seasoned and used as firewood. Many Christmas tree farms and municipalities will also recycle trees, but they should be stripped of tinsel and all other decorations first.

Your County Cooperative Extension has a list of the county's Christmas tree growers. These growers have a fine selection of trees, wreaths and decorations. Some offer hot chocolate visits from Santa and gift shops which make the trip a true family affair. If you would like a copy of this list, contact your County Cooperative Extension Monday thru Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Buffalo Bills players, Steve Tasker #89 and Ted Washington #92, pose for this humorous "got milk?" poster that was distributed to schools. The posters are one component of an on-going ADADC campaign to increase awareness and attendance at the school breakfast programs throughout New York and New Jersey.

NFL Players Encourage Kids To Eat Breakfast

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Reaching out to kids and parents through television and schools, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) line up Buffalo Bills and New York Giants players to participate in a school breakfast awareness campaign this fall. Featuring television and radio public service announcements (PSAs), special limited edition posters to hang in school cafeterias, along with school visits, the campaign encouraged children to eat school breakfast. By increasing attendance at school breakfast, milk sales ultimately go up, simply because milk is a government required component of the school breakfast meal. According to Rick Naczi, ADADC Executive Vice President, "If all the children who ate lunch in school also ate breakfast, milk sales would increase by 20 million cartons per day."

Breakfast Visits Generate Publicity

To generate media publicity, New York Giants Rob Zatechka, #73, and Michael Strahan, #92, served up winning breakfasts to a record-number of attendees at the school breakfast programs in Jersey City, New Jersey and the Choir Academy of Harlem (best known for the Boys Choir of Harlem), respectively.

Mini-Grants Available For Tobacco-Control Activities

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Community-based organizations in 23 Pennsylvania counties can apply for mini-grants $500 to $2,000 to support youth-oriented tobacco control activities. The purpose of the mini-grants program is to encourage cooperation among groups, such as Take Action for Tobacco Free Youth (TAFTY) that are concerned about reducing the number of children and teenagers using tobacco products in their community.

The Community Coalitions for Tobacco-Free Youth project, a collaboration of the Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia and the Pennsylvania State University will make the awards. "We will give preference to applications that involve partnerships with community-based tobacco-control coalitions and youth-serving organizations," says Martha Keintz, project director. "We also are looking for applications that involve young people directly in developing and carrying out the activities."

In the United States, about 3,000 children and teenagers start smoking every day. These new smokers replace adult smokers who die or become disabled every day from smoking-related diseases. Biennial surveys of seventh, ninth and twelfth graders, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Education, show that regular use of cigarettes has increased steadily since 1989 in all three grades. Reducing youth access to tobacco products remains a major public health issue.

Applications must be postmarked by Wed., Dec. 18, 1996. Funds will be awarded by Feb. 14, 1997 and must be used by June 30, 1997. The project is funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Health, Tobacco Control Program.

For more information and application forms, contact Debra Bryant at the Wayne County office of the Penn State Cooperative Extension, (717) 253-5970 ext. 239 or Al Snider, project manager at Pennsylvania State University, (814) 863-2695.

ANSWER — Eva Burrell of Glen Gardner, N.J., wanted instructions for an old-time holiday centerpiece called, "Dancing Snowballs." Thanks to Brenda Nuss, Catawissa, for sending instructions. I hope this works as some readers had written several years ago that the ingredients in moth balls have changed in recent years and no longer create this effect.

Fill a clear bowl that has a curved surface with water. Add one teaspoon baking soda, one teaspoon citric acid crystals, and three to five moth balls, for each cup of water. The chemical reaction will keep the moth balls moving from the surface of the water to the bottom of the bowl for about two hours. If you place the bowl on a mirror, you get twice the effect. The water may be colored with food coloring or a flower may be floated on top. When the balls stop moving, add another spoonful of citric acid crystals and baking soda to start them again.

Hereford Association Recognizes Top Cows

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The most productive cows of the Hereford breed have been recognized by the American Hereford Association (AHA). The Kansas City-based breed group named some 2,500 superior cows under the combined benchmark dam and most efficient cow categories.

"Regardless of the name you use to apply to these cows, they fit the job description of an ideal beef cow," said Dr. John Hough, AHA's director of research and performance. "They've met strict requirements for early calving, reproductive efficiency, calving intervals of no greater than one year, and weight ratios in the top end of the breeders' herds."

Benchmark dams and most efficient cows were produced from 775 Hereford herds. Top five states in Hereford cows recognized were Nebraska with 283, South Dakota with 258, Montana with 214, North Dakota with 175, and Kansas with 159.

National Farmers Convention Focuses On Solutions

AMES, Iowa — National Farmers is gearing up for its 1996 National Convention which will be held Dec. 9-12 in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

From selling on the futures market to improving the quality of livestock, dairy and grain production, this year's convention will be packed with valuable information for America's farmers and ranchers.

This year's theme, Strength Through Unity, illustrates National Farmers' continued and increasing success in the marketplace. With the cascading Niagara Falls as the backdrop for the convention, members and leaders will plan for the future of independent farming and American agriculture.

"With the continued concentration of buyers in the industry, added volatility in the markets and the lack of a safety net, it's critical for producers to look at disciplined marketing programs that will help them earn the best return possible from the marketplace," said National Farmers President Gene Paul.

Throughout the week, National Farmers administration and leaders will share their vision for the future of agriculture. On Tuesday, Dec. 10, National Farmers President Gene Paul of Delavan, Minn., will address the convention on the state of the organization. Vice President Paul Olson of Taylor, Wis., will also address the convention on Dec. 10.

On Wednesday, Dec. 11, National Farmers Director of Program Development Richard Ellinghuysen will illustrate how the North American Free Trade Agreement, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and the 1996 landmark farm bill will impact farm prices. He will further explain how farmers should adjust their marketing plans to succeed in the changing trade climate.

Ellinghuysen serves on the Agricultural Technical Advisory Committee by joint appointment of the U.S. trade representative and the U.S. secretary of agriculture. He also serves on the Agricultural Advisory Committee to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Commodity Day is Wednesday, Dec. 11. The livestock, grain and dairy department leaders will report on their successes this year and vision for 1997 and beyond.

Soy Oil Products Reach Irrigation, Fire Protection Equipment Industries

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Through commercialization efforts of the United Soybean Board, new cost-effective industrail soybean oil resources are flowing into both the fire truck pump primer and water well sub pump lubricant markets. These products have a potential to increase U.S. soy oil use by 85-100 million pounds each year.

Developed by Gunnar Lynum of Strategic Marketing Development (SMD) in Kankakee, Ill., both SMD Soy Primer and SMD Virgin Soy Drip Oil are viable replacements for their petroleum predecessors. The products are in final stages of commercial testing, with market development anticipated in Fiscal Year 1997. Using a modest market objective of 50 million pounds, these two products could increase the value of soybeans by nearly $11 million annually.

"This New Uses project is one example of how the United Soybean Board is committed to investing checkoff funds not only in developing new uses for soybeans but in finding and developing the markets that will support those new uses long into the future," said Ralph Christensen, a soybean producer from Onawa, Iowa, and chairman of the USB New Uses Committee.

According to Lynum, the SMD Soy Primer is soy oil that is slightly emulsified and works to propel water through the fire hose similar to a hydraulic effect within the fire truck pump system. The overflow of soy primer left behind is non-toxic and completely biodegradable. "The primer market is an EPA-driven market," said Lynum. "The primer market is under scrutiny of the EPA, and this is why biodegradable oils are starting to replace petroleum."

Lynum expects the commercial trials at two metro St. Louis fire departments and the nation's largest volunteer fire department near Indianapolis to wrap up in fall 1996.

Northrup King Guarantees Corn Borer Protection

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — Northrup King Co. is backing the effectiveness of its newly introduced European corn borer-resistant corn hybrids through a unique program that guarantees that farmers will not get better season-long control against the pest from any other source.

The company's protection guarantee assures that no competitive Bt corn hybrid or spray or granular insecticide will provide better season-long control of corn borers than Northrup King's Bt hybrids. Farmers will receive a full refund on their Bt corn seed purchase should they be dissatisfied with the hybrid's effectiveness at resisting damage from European corn borers throughout the season and through all generations of the pest.

Northrup King's Bt corn hybrids recently were approved for sale in the U.S. by the Environmental Protection Agency. Orders for units are being taken by dealers for planting in 1997.

"We've said all along that Northrup King's Bt corn delivers a level of insurance against damage from corn borers that farmers never had before," said Ed Shonsey, president and chief executive officer of Northrup King. "Now as more competitors bring other Bt products to market and harvest is under way, farmers are learning that these hybrids may vary in their ability to defend against the corn borer, especially in its second and third generations."

Northrup King conducted research on its Bt corn for the past 10 years. Beginning in 1992, the company and university agronomists began to evaluate the performance of its hybrids against traditional hybrids treated with insecticide and the Bt corn hybrids of other seed companies, in field trials across the Corn Belt.

Milking System Helps Dairy Farmers Improve Efficiency

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Engineers at Alfa Laval Agri™ have worked diligently to create the newest in automated milking systems that can cover all stalling operations with a full orchestration of options.

Maestro™ Automated Milking System is available for tandem, parallel and herringbone parlor operations.

By providing a systematic automated approach to milking, the Maestro System can improve efficiency and profitability.

Maestro enables dairy farmers to conduct all their milking functions from a single, centralized panel. A sleeker, more slender cabinet design, along with a narrower cabinet base that fits tight to the butt pan provides better light for the operator, more head room, and milker units that are closer to the cow's udder.

Installation time is faster as well, with color-coded wiring harnesses and snap-fit construction. Easier and quicker installations reduce installation costs.

Tractors Ensure Small Jobs Are Done Right

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — The Belarus 2000 Series tractors are small tractors that are big on performance. Manufactured to provide durability, value and affordability, the 2000 Series is part of the new generation of tractors being offered by Belarus.

Belarus 2000 Series tractors are designed for hobby farmers, as well as lawn and landscaping applications. Their 22 hp fuel efficient 2-cylinder, air-cooled diesel engines are matched with a solid transmission with 16 forward and 8 reverse speeds. The 2000 Series offers two-wheel (2011) or four-wheel (2045) rugged traction.

Designed for hobby farmers and lawn and landscape applications, the Belarus 2000 tráctors are small tractors that are big on performance.

New Holland Adds High-Clearance Tractor

The New Holland Model 8010 high-clearance tractor is powered by a 6-cylinder 96 HP Genesis™ diesel. Available as 2WD and 4WD, the new tractor is available with 16x4 Dual Power or 12x3 constant mesh transmission for a wide range of crop and field conditions.

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The new Model 8010 high-clearance New Holland tractor is powered by a 6-cylinder 456 CUI Genesis™ engine. Power has been increased to 96 PTO HP, said Product Manager Jerry Dieker.

Drawbar ground clearance has been increased to 29 inches. Axles are adjustable from 72 inches to 84 inches.

The FWD Model 8010 tractor's high clearance with increased power provides a dependable unit specially adapted for vegetable crop work where growing and harvesting operations have to go on in spite of wet or muddy conditions. A 12x3 constant mesh transmission with creeper gear or a 16x4 Dual Power transmission offer design flexibility for a wide range of crops. Hydraulic flow of 9.3 GPM (17.4 GPM is optional) provides ample power for hydraulically driven equipment. Two remotes are standard.

Dieker points out this economical new tractor has been engineered to provide reliable power with simple controls and easy servicing that are specially important in commercial vegetable production where work crew assignments require frequent operator changes.

Utility Tractor Combines Value, Time-Tested Features

ATLANTA, Ga. — "There is strong demand today for a value-priced, two-wheel drive utility and chore tractor," said John Sargeant, Massey Ferguson product marketing manager. "The MF 240S combines a classic design with reliability proven over years of use in world markets."

The new MF 240S is powered by a fuel efficient, 3-cylinder Perkins direct-injection diesel engine rated at 41 PTO horsepower. This engine delivers unequaled torque, efficiency and reliability for tillage, planting, mowing, hauling, grading and chores. Its unique long stroke design develops high torque at low engine rpm for added lugging power to pull through difficult conditions without constant gear changes.

An 8-speed manual transmission features sliding glears with planetary reduction to provide eight forward and two reverse speeds. Four speeds in the important 2 to 7 MPH range, with excellent gear overlap, make it easy to match ground speed to the job.

The 240S can handle a wide range of applications with its Category 1 three-point hitch and Ferguson® System hydraulics for precise implement control. A response control regulates the rate of drop and the position control lets the operator set and maintain the implement position.

New Massey Ferguson® MF 240S, a two-wheel drive, 41 PTO horsepower utility and chore tractor, is value-priced and includes time-tested features combined with a classic design proven reliable over the years.

The two-wheel drive MF 240S has a round-section rear axle with dry drum brakes. This is a simple design that provides excellent reliability and is easy to service and maintain. Power assisted steering uses hydraulic power for easy steering effort and maintains a full mechanical link for manual steering if needed.

The MF 240S has a comfortable, full-size, deluxe spring suspension seat with arm rests. The seat can be adjusted for height, weight, leg length, and seat back height. A field-folding ROPS gives the operator a quick and simple method of reducing the overall height of the tractor in low overhead situations. Dished fenders make it easier to get on and off the tractor, and affords the operator excellent visibility of an implement's operation.

"For farmers who want a four-wheel drive utility tractor with advanced performance features, we offer the MF 240," added Sargeant. "This tractor is available in both two-wheel drive and four-wheel drive models with additional features for increased performance in more difficult job conditions."

The MF 240 has the same 41 PTO Perkins diesel engine, 8-speed manual transmission, and Category 1 three-point hitch as the MF 240S. High performance features on the two-wheel drive MF 240 include a square section rear axle and wet disc brakes.

The four-wheel drive MF 240 has a cast front axle with parallel drive for a low center of gravity, a tight 55 degree turning angle, and wet disc brakes for quick, sure stops. 9.5 gpm auxiliary hydraulics with two auxiliary spool valves are standard on the 4WD MF 240, optional on the 2WD model. Positive, accurate hydrostatic power steering leaves operators less tired at the end of a long day.

MANURE ODORS — CURRENT SOLUTIONS

Editor's Note: The following article was printed in September but was inadvertently run out of sequence with a similar article. For that reason, we are running it a second time.

No odor control methods appear to be completely effective and many are cost prohibitive. More than one control strategy should be used to address odor generation at all three sources — the livestock facility, the manure storage area, and manure application to the field.

Here is a list of technologies available.

Chemical Additives

C. Mike Williams, director of the North Carolina Animal and Poultry Waste Management Center, has been evaluating various additives for odor control.

In a recent series of studies, Williams has found that some compounds provide moderate improvement in odor intensity while others have no effect, or increase odor intensity.

Williams incubated small samples of manure and then treated them with one of several classes of commonly used additives: 1) Odor counteractant (atomized into the air stream); 2) Digestive deodorant; 3) Potassium permanganate (an oxidizing agent); 4) Sphagnum peat moss (an adsorbent); and 5) Chemical deodorant.

After one week of treatment, filtered air was pumped over the manure samples and past a piece of cotton cloth. The cloth was evaluated by 10 trained panelists.

The panelists rated each cloth on an eight-point scale for: Odor intensity (0=none at all...8 maximal); irritation intensity (0=none at all...8 maximal); pleasantness (0=extremely pleasant...4=neither pleasant nor unpleasant...8=extremely unpleasant).

Table 1: Effect of Manure Additives on Odor Characteristics

| MANURE ADDITIVE | ODOR | IRRITATION | PLEASANTNESS |
|---|---|---|---|
| Untreated control | 4 | 2.5 | 6 |
| Odor counteractant | 3 | 1.5 | 4 |
| Digestive deodorant | 4 | 2.5 | 5.5 |
| Potassium permanganate (an oxidizing agent) | 3.3 | 1.6 | 5 |
| Sphagnum peat moss (an adsorbent) | 4 | 2.5 | 5.5 |
| Chemical deodorant | 5.3 | 3.3 | 6.5 |

Only the counteractant and potassium permanganate decreased odor intensity and odor irritation. But as the table shows, the improvement was not dramatic.

The commercial name of the counteractant is NC 2000 from Newman Industries (Addison, IL; 630-628-7199). Potassium permanganate, used under the conditions of this test, would cost more than $400 per 1,000 gallons of manure. The name of the deodorants have not been released. Note that these were preliminary tests, conducted unless laboratory conditions. Field evaluations are needed for a more thorough analysis.

Tests On Chemical Additives At Iowa State University

Dwaine Bundy reports that several additives have proven to be effective at reducing odor, and possibly solids. The additives tested include the following: Shac Pit Additive (Shac Environmental Product; Alberta, Canada; 403-528-4446); MPC (Kane Manufacturing; Des Moines, IA; 515-262-3001); Bio-Safe 1040E (Bio-Safe Company; Bettendorf, IA; 916-635-3962); Agro Solutions Product (Agro Solutions; Tama, IA; 515-232-1103); and Lisa product (Lisa, Inc; Boone, IA; 515-432-1667).

In Bundy's laboratory setting, the products reduced the odor threshold from 58 to 85 percent. Shac, Bio-Safe, and MPC all increased available nitrogen. Field observations by producers indicated that these same products reduced solids in manure storage. Costs vary depending on the size and nature of the operation, but appear to range from $.30-.50 per hog.

Altering pH

Reducing pH in manure with an acid (hydrochloric, sulfuric, phosphoric or nitric) to about 5 increases nitrogen fixation, thus reducing ammonia emissions (Oosthoek and Kroodsma, 1990).

Unfortunately, addition of some of these acids increases the nitrogen or phosphorus content of the manure and can increase the release of hydrogen sulfide.

Lime can be used to increase the pH of manure, which has been shown to reduce odor and hydrogen sulfide emissions (Day, 1966).

At a pH of 9.5, almost no hydrogen sulfide will escape the manure. A pH level of about 12 allows solids to settle and reduces the moisture content and odor production (EPA, 1984).

As a result of high pH, septage does not putrefy, cause odors, or present a health hazard.

A recent study by Dwaine Bundy at Iowa State University indicates that alkaline agents (such as various types of kiln dust, fly ash, and lime products) reduce odors from manure storage areas. The alkaline products were added at the rate of .25 to .50 pound for each pound of manure solids (10-20 pounds of product per 1,000 gallons of liquid manure). Reduction in odor was significant, but it is apparently essential to thoroughly mix the product and manure. Costs of the product, including mixing, was slightly more than $1 per hog marketed.

Covering Manure Storage

Manure storage areas have been successfully covered with various organic materials including straw, leaves, and grass clippings.

A formal project sponsored by the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture and Food (PAMI, 1993) demonstrated a subjective reduction in storage odors by floating a layer of straw on top of lagoons. Good quality, long-stem straw worked best, but even poor quality straws could be used if placed on top of floating sheets of polystyrene.

When applied alone, initial depths of straw should be 8-10 inches to avoid re-application during a typical storage time. If less straw is applied initially, several re-applications may be needed.

When applying straw on top of polystyrene floats, potential problems including increased maintenance and difficulties with the floats when the manure is pumped out. Annual costs (1993) for a 25,000 square foot lagoon were estimated (Canadian dollars) at $1,100 for straw alone and $2,050 for straw supported by floating polystyrene.

Manure storage areas have also been covered with concrete, a conventional wooden truss roof, and plastic tarps. Costs of these options range from approximately $3 per square foot to more than $6 per square foot.

Injection

Either injection or incorporation of the manure goes a long way toward reducing odor from the most intensive source — spreading. Unfortunately, injection is not possible for all soils and it may create some production problems for small grains and hay.

Aeration

Aerating manure effectively reduces odor by enhancing the growth of aerobic bacteria, which generate less odor than the anaerobes.

Aeration decreases the biological oxygen demand (BOD) and total organic acids (TOA) contents, both of which are highly correlated to odor offensiveness (Evans and Thacker, 1985).

Getting the air (oxygen) into the manure on a continuous basis is expensive. Meyer (1994) recommends 1 hp per 1,000 square feet of lagoon surface area.

This amount of aeration would provide oxygen for the liquid near the surface.

The material several feet below the surface would remain in an anaerobic state. For example, a 2,000-head swine finishing building would generate about 540,000 gallons of manure in six months. If this manure were stored outside, and had an average depth of manure of 12 feet, then the surface area would be 9,000 square feet.

To aerate that volume of manure would require 9 horse power, which would require about $450/month in electricity.

Methane Digestion

Until about five years ago, there had been two swine operations in Pennsylvania with methane digesters, but one has since ceased operation. The digesters were effective at reducing odor from the manure storage facilities.

Both operations used the methane to generate electricity and heat. But both digesters were expensive.

(Today, a digester for a 400-sow farrow to feeder operation would cost $250,000 or more.)

Will the savings in heat and electricity pay for the investment? Probably not, when all costs of operating the digester are considered.

Fan Scrubbers

These devices are apparently used on a limited basis in Europe, especially in the Netherlands where hogs and people live in proximity.

Scrubbers work by various principles, depending on air volume, to remove both dust and odorous compounds. Limitations to the feasibility of scrubbers include cost, multiple exhaust-fan locations, curtain-sided buildings, and maintenance.

In a recent series of discussions with a manufacturer of commercial scrubbers, I quickly found that the cost and maintenance make these devices impractical for hog enterprises.

Solids Separation

By concentrating the solids into a small area, the surface area of the odorous material is reduced. This means that fewer compounds will be carried off by the wind, and it also means that covering the high-solids area is more practical.

The secondary lagoon has a higher water content, and therefore a lower BOD content and less odor.

Composting

Composting is the aerobic decomposition of organic materials. Initially, composting generates odor, but as it progresses, it takes on an earthy, non-offensive odor.

Temperatures reach 120-1400 F at the peak of bacterial activity. The requirements for successful composting are rather forgiving but certain guidelines must be followed.

The carbon:nitrogen ratio should be 20:1 to 40:1, and the moisture content should ideally be 40-65 percent (NRAES, 1992).

The water and nitrogen contents are both rather high in liquid manure relative to the desired levels. Therefore the addition of a dry carbon source such as straw, corn stalks or waste paper, is needed to bring the dry matter content and the carbon:nitrogen ratio in line.

In a demonstration project at Penn State University, Bob Graves (1993, personal communication) found that adding enough dry material to absorb all visible moisture and eliminate seepage also appeared to provide enough carbon to support composting.

Oxygen should be introduced into the system by forced air or frequent turning of the piles or windrows. Ideal particle size is ½ -2 inches in diameter.

Potential Hazards

The noxious gases and dust generated in livestock facilities present potential health problems for individuals working under these conditions.

A recent survey of 72 environmentally controlled swine facilities indicated that 77 percent of the facilities surveyed had ammonia levels above the acceptable threshold limit values for human exposure after eight hour exposure (Gerber et al., 1991).

A survey of 2,459 Iowa livestock confinement workers showed that more than 60 percent of those responding reported some type of adverse effect, including cough, sore throat, runny nose, eye irritation, headaches, tightness of chest, or muscle aches and pains (Donham and Gustafson, 1982).

Susan Schiffman, a psychologist at Duke University, is studying the effects of livestock odors on the people who live downwind of hog operations in North Carolina. She is finding that odor can have a negative impact on humans. (King, 1994).

Summary

Four broad categories of odor control include covering manure storage areas, treatment of the manure with additives, treatment of the air in the swine building, and subsoil injection or immediate incorporation of the manure at the time of application.

The area that begs for results is the treatment of manure and air. And while we have much to learn, we are getting more sophisticated in our treatment methods and evaluation techniques. This will help to weed out the abundance of snake oil that seems to be in the market place.

In the meantime, as technology advances, there will be many techniques attempted, and only a few may prove beneficial. In the end, the solution will likely be dictated by what our neighbors are willing to tolerate.

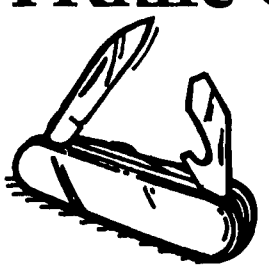
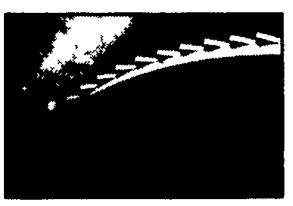
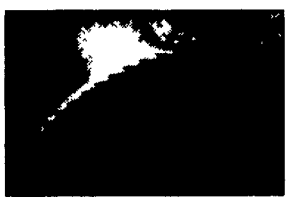
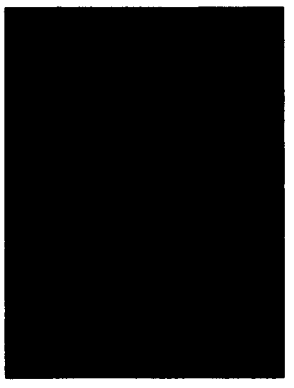
A Knife Cuts Twine... An Oswalt® Hay Saw Cuts Hay!



(NEW HAY SAW PROCESSOR MAKES QUICK WORK OF LONG STEMMED HAY)







Some mixer companies will tell you they have "knives" installed on the augers of their mixers that will cut through long stemmed hay But that's like comparing a pocket knife to a chain saw Oswalt's newest feed mixer cuts through long stemmed hay, turning it into a blended, uniform and highly digestible ration and it does it in record time!

Hay Saw sections are installed in a continuous ribbon on the leading edge flighting of the bottom augers. As hay is pulled into the lower augers, an even sawing action cuts effortlessly through the long stemmed hay And because it saws as the auger turns, it actually processes hay with a lot less torque, saving time and fuel

Ask your Oswalt Dealer for a demo Then you'll see what we mean when we say

Research Award May Benefit Plants on Earth — And in Space

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Research under way in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences may benefit environmental professionals, farmers, greenhouse operators, and other people who depend on and care for plants.

It also may help astronauts survive extended journeys into space.

Edie S. Sears, research fellow and doctorate student in the department of agricultural and biological engineering, has received a Graduate Student Researcher's Program Award from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to support the work. Her adviser for the project is Dr. Paul N. Walker, professor of agricultural engineering.

Sears' research, which will take advantage of cutting-edge equipment available at Penn State's Applied Research Laboratory, may help solve important problems for both extended space travel and Earth-bound agriculture.

"Extended space travel will required an enclosed environment that can biologically regenerate itself," Sears said. "Because plants play such a vital role, their health must be carefully monitored to sustain a life-support system."

Astronauts wouldn't have all day to devote to plant care, so monitoring plant stress needs to be automated. Using computers and remote sensing technology, Sears is developing a system that measures various stresses on plants in a growth chamber by intepreting how their leaves reflect and respond to different sources of light.

"This research will investigate plant stress related to mineral nutrition, but the final design also will have the capacity to detect other physiological and biological stresses, too," she said.

Traditional plant monitoring systems look for signs of stress on one leaf on one plant at a time. Sears' system will streamline the process by taking measurements from the entire plant canopy inside the growth chamber — providing speedier and more comprehensive evaluation of the plants' condition.

The unique technology Sears will be using is a Russian-developed, acousto-optic tunable filter (AOTF) spectrometer. "This instrument is lightweight, compact, durable, highly sensitive, portable, and scans quickly," Sears said. "It has no mechancially movable parts, which makes it small, fast, and reliable. It also doesn't require much power. It would be ideal for monitoring plant stresses during an extended space mission."

It could be ideal for many applications on Earth, too. "This project will take place in a growth chamber, because we want to see if we can make it work at a microcosmic level," Sears said. "If it does, the same technology could be adapted to evaluate larger systems, including plants in greenhouses, crops on farms, and even entire forests."

Sears' proposal, "AOTF Spectrometer System for the Remote Detection of Plant Canopy Nutrient Stresses in a NASA Controlled Ecological Life Support System," received funding in the area of Advanced Life Support under the Life Sciences Division of NASA's Office of Life and Microgravity Sciences and Applications.

Sears' proposal was selected from among more than 100 applications the office received for 1996. Her adviser for the project is Dr. Paul N. Walker, professor of agricultural engineering.

Two Award-Winning Tractor Series Available

ATLANTA, Ga. — Massey Ferguson's MF 6100 and MF 8100 high-performance tractor series, from 86 to 180 PTO horsepower, received the OEMmie Award for innovative design and performance at the annual Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) Off-Highway Conference.

The MF 6100 and MF8100 series tractors were selected for their innovative features and functions that set them apart from others in North America, and for advancing the state of the art and increasing equipment performance. The award is sponsored by OEM Off-Highway magazine, published by Johnson Hill Press.

"These new tractor ranges have taken the lead in the emerging competitive battle for increased 'power efficiency'," said Wilfred Boyle, director, Massey Ferguson operations, "and this was one of the key factors in earning the award."

The MF 6100 and MF 8100 series tractors are designed to minimize power losses through the transmission and deliver up to 90 percent of their engine horsepower to the wheels and PTO, explained Boyle. "With more engine power available as 'useable power', everyday tractor operations are more productive and efficient."

These tractors offer a choice of horsepower and two or four-wheel-drive to meet the requirements of a wide range of applications and types of farms.

Swather Allows Headers To 30-Feet Wide

ATLANTA, Ga. — The new Massey Ferguson Model 220 Swather features exceptional swath clearance for increased productivity. A table or header opening up to 70 inches wide and a 40-inch under frame ground clearance allow swathing of heavy, leafy crops with draper headers up to 30 feet in width.

"The MF 220 Swather answers the demands of farmers for increased productivity in large acreages of small grains and canola," said Tom Draper, Massey Ferguson product marketing manager. "In tall, heavy or leafy crops the MF 220 Swather can lay down the swaths today's high capacity combines can handle."

New MF 220 Swather features for increased productivity include:

• A header flotation and lift system allows headers up to 30 feet wide to follow ground contours, allowing more crop to be put in the windrow.

• The header lift linkage floats up and down and allows headers to tilt from side to side to keep the cutter bar at a consistent height on uneven ground.

• Draper headers with swath openings adjustable from 54 to 70 inches produce optimum swaths in both light and heavy crops. Optional canvas inserts can reduce swath openings to a minimum of 42 inches as needed.

• The 131-inch drive wheel track width with rear steering axle from 99.6 to 125.6 inches, and 40-inch under frame ground clearance, allows for the laying of heavy and wide swaths while improving overall machine balance.

• The cutterbar knife is driven hydraulically through an epicyclic gear crank rather than a wobble box. All belts, chains, and pulleys are eliminated for a smoother running knife drive with increased reliability and durability.

• New styling includes a rear hood that tilts up and slides back for easy access to and maintenance of hydraulics, cooling, drive train and engine components.

Project Examines Ways To Cut Soybean Production Costs

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — With many soybean producers harvesting or preparing to harvest this year's soybean crop, the producers will be paying close attention to the cost per acre and per bushel to produce soybeans.

According to the most recent data from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the average cost to produce an acre of soybeans is $194.92. With a national average of 33.48 bushels per acre, it costs farmers $5.82 to produce a bushel of soybeans. These averages vary by geographic region.

Through a North Central Soybean Research Program-funded project, research is under way to reduce producer costs. The study is headed up by Ed Oplinger, an agronomist at the University of Wisconsin, and is being conducted in eight states. State portions of the national soybean checkoff are used to fund NCSRP research projects. Members of the 10-state NCSRP board coordinate research activities with the United Soybean Board (USB), which also performs an administrative role for the program.

At the heart of the study, Oplinger and the other researchers are comparing no-till and reduced-till production systems to conventional tillage, then combining other influencing factors such as planting time, seed varieties, seeding rates, and row spacing.

"Apart from the cost for land, growers can significantly reduce their cost of production by reducing tillage and trips over the fields," said Oplinger. "Fuel, labor, and machinery are the next most expensive inputs they have. A grower that makes six trips over his field obviously has a lot more expense than a grower that only makes three trips."

Oplinger also says early planting has a big role in reducing costs. He says most producers are planting as early as feasible when the growing season begins.

"Our data suggests that producers lose a half a bushel per acre per day (they don't plant)," he said. "So with a 10-day delay in planting, you have lost 5 bushels which you can never make up. The yield loss at planting time is a permanent yield loss."

The type of seed the producer selects also impacts costs and yields. There is also a 10 percent, and sometimes 20 percent, difference in yield between high yielding varieties and the average varieties. Oplinger says "unbiased" information is available through university departments of agronomy and their extension centers.

"Too many of our growers make variety decisions based on who their salesperson is or the color of the bag the seed comes in, rather than making it on unbiased information," said Oplinger.

He said producers need to take into consideration their preferred tillage program, the condition of the land and the amount of rainfall before selecting a seed variety. Universities have information on how the seed varieties perform under different conditions.

"We have run tests that indicated that some varieties perform better relation to others in no-till. Others would be the variety of choice in conventional till," explained Oplinger.

How far apart the rows are spaced also impacts yield. According to project data, as the row spacing is narrowed yields increase. Oplinger says that in Wisconsin the majority of soybeans are planted in row spacings of less than 10 inches.

Physiologically, the soybean plant is capable of yielding more when it intercepts more of the sunlight earlier in the growing. Another advantage is that narrower rows provide a better canopy for protection against weeds.

He indicates that the tendency is that when growers make a change from conventional tillage to no-till, then they narrow their row spacing.

"In general, the conclusion is that the yields have not changed substantially as a result of making that switch. Our data would suggest that producers gain a little in yield with narrow row spacing, but lose a little yield because of no-till. This (the trade-off) is fine, because in making that switch to no-till, growers are reducing their cost of production because of fewer trips over the field, less machinery input and less labor input."

Additionally, Oplinger said research indicates that in a no-till program, the yields increase and production costs decrease as the seeding rate is increased.

Farm Bureau Announces Achievement Winners

RANDALLSTOWN, Md. — George and Debbie Donnon of Rising Sun (Cecil County) are this year's winners of the Maryland Farm Bureau Young Farmer's Achievement Award.

The award — given each year to a Maryland Farm Bureau member between the ages of 18 and 35 who is actively farming — recognizes that member's progress as a farmer and his or her potential for growth and leadership activities within the agricultural and greater community.

The Donnons have a 200-acre dairy farm where they milk 80 cows and grow corn, wheat, and alfalfa. The operation began in 1992 on a rented facility in Westtown, Pa. with about 40 cows. Since then, the Donnons purchased their current farm in May 1993 and hired their first full-time employee in January this year.

The couple has two children, Lindsey, age 5, and April, age 2.

The Donnons, who accepted this honor at the recent Maryland Farm Bureau Young Farmer Retreat in Salisbury, Md., received $500 from The New Dodge. Maryland Farm Bureau will also pay their expenses to attend the American Farm Bureau Federation Convention in Nashville this January and the Young Farmer and Rancher Leadership Conference in Denver this February.

At the AFBF Convention, the Donnons will have an opportunity to compete for the grand prize, a 1997 truck provided by The New Dodge.

For more information, contact the Maryland Farm Bureau at (410) 922-3426.

Hammer Discharge

Patented Free Swinging Hammer Expeller

Rear Drive Compartment*

Forged Steel Hammer

The expeller on all ProTwin models features 15 forged steel hammers mounted on a 2½" shaft. The hammers pivot on ⅞" bolts with nylon anti-seize type bushings that allow free movement. The expeller rotates at over 800 RPM allowing each eight pound hammer to swing down into the material peeling it off and slinging it underhand in a fine spread pattern with no clumps. The 3" wide free swinging hammers absorb shock and tolerate most foreign objects. Each hammer is faced with a work hardening manganese steel wear plate for longer life and low cost replacement. The adjustable shroud allows easy hammer clearance setting for optimum spread pattern width. This proven hammer expeller design enables fine spreading control and material calibration through the combination of the hydraulic door opening and ground speed.

The right auger is driven at the rear and is shear pin protected. Bearings chains and sprockets are easily accessible for routine maintenance.

*Shields removed for illustration only. Do not operate without shields in place and functioning.

More Power than a Compact, More Mobility Than a Full Size TLB.

1 - New
1 - Demo
1 - Used
In Stock
Hurry In...

The compact size of the L35 with TL720& BT900 allows you to operate efficiently in tight, small areas that are inaccessible to larger TLBs. And, it's easy to move from one job to another. It can be transported with just a 3/4 ton pickup truck and trailer, usually with a regular Class C Driver's License. Operators find the controls "user -friendly," especially useful in rental fleets, and large contractor fleets where operators may go from one piece of equipment to another on a regular basis. The L35 retains the full versatility of a compact with its 3-pt. hitch and PTO for tilling, mowing or box scraper work.

UTILITY SERIES TRACTORS
9011L • 98 HP

BELARUS VALUE. IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

Introducing two bu changes in how small lots get done. Th 8011L and 9011L offe low fe ur nce design and tight turnin radius that provide even higher level of maneuverability yet they fulfill our age t offe the same durability value and affordability you xpect from Belarus.

Choose from the 8011L and t tough 81 hp four cylinder water cooled engine or the 9011Ls turbo charged 98 hp. Both engines have strong torque characteristics. Add it all up and you've got utility tractors ideal for every type of operation from orchard and vineyards to poultry operations and grounds maintenance.

But the exceptional value doesn't stop th r. The 8011L and 9011L offer excellent lift capacity for front end loader applications. Other impressive features include power assisted steering, and a fully adjustable seat for operator comfort and convenience.

Combined with their ease of maintenance and servicing, it's not hard to see how Belarus makes even the smallest jobs easier in a big way. That's Belarus value.

PURINA PROFILE

down to earth
K&K Feeds, Inc.

In what is called a "down to earth" style of doing business, K&K Feeds, Inc., located in Richland, Lebanon County serves farmers in eastern Lebanon, northern Lancaster, and western Berks counties with Purina Chows that fit the individual needs of each of their many customers.

Owned by Donald Krall, the dealership serves a large section of plain farmers that continue to keep the area in farmland.

Donald Krall, owner, left and Duane Nolt, show some of the Purina Chow feeds for their customers. Dairy and Hog feeds are their main business, but they supply feeds for all other kinds of livestock as well.

"We serve an area of good basic farming by conservative people who support the family farm," Krall said. "I think there will always be farms in this area. With Purina's research and technical backup support we sell value more than just a feeding program. You need the appropriate recommendations to get the most from your purchased feed. With Purina's support we help farmers not only balance rations but also help with herd management decisions."

Most of the nine employees at K&K have been on the job for many years. They know farming and they know their customers. This relationship with customers is one of the reasons farmers keep coming back as repeat customers. "By using the right Purina product for correct and on-time delivery, we have a lot to offer in good service, Krall said.

Over the years, Krall has seen dairymen switch from grinding ear corn to the use of shelled corn and high-moisture corn in their feeding rations. And K&K has followed the change with appropriate Purina concentrates to balance farm-grown grains and forages.

They often give advice that limits the use of purchased feeds. But this has become one of their best selling points because it shows interest in the welfare of their customers. "We are concerned that our products make the farmer money," Krall said. "Because if the farm isn't profitable, we will not have any customers.

The feed business is interesting and we have a lot of good customers. We appreciate our customers and their repeat business. We hope to continue to serve farmers in this area for many years into the future."
